Rush Medical College

THE curriculum of this school of medicine requires a proper preliminary education and three years of study in college, devoted to laboratory, didactic and clinical instruction, to recitations and to manual training in the use of instruments and appliances. Students beginning the study of medicine in the fall of 1894, and thereafter, will be required to take four years of study in the college.

Instruction is given in two capacious, well-lighted edifices. The new building contains five large laboratories, in which are conducted the practical laboratory courses in Anatomy, Physiology and Histology, Chemistry, Materia Medica, Pathology and Bacteriology.

The old building is devoted to instruction by clinics, didactic lectures, and by numerous important practical courses in manual training in manipulations and in the use of the instruments employed in medicine, surgery, obstetrics and the specialties.

Manual training in all departments of medicine is a special feature of the instruction in this college. Systematic recitations, conducted in five commodious recitation rooms, are regarded as a most important means of teaching.

With over seventy professors and instructors, and with ample room and appliances, this school is able to furnish its classes with the most approved systematic education in medicine.

Physicians and medical students are invited to visit the laboratories and to inspect the educational appliances of this school.

For further information and for announcements, apply to the College Clerk, or to the Secretary,

A Biography

“A sacred halo surrounds this name, as imperishable as the pages of history.”

ON the day before Christmas, one hundred and fifty years ago, in the hamlet of Byberry, near Philadelphia, there came into this world a baby boy whose entrance was not heralded by salvos of cannon nor thanksgivings in churches, but whose exit sixty-eight years later caused more widespread grief than that of any other person, excepting possibly the Father of his Country. Benjamin Rush, as might readily be supposed from his own life, was descended from ancestors whose individuality and independence of thought and action demanded attention from those amongst whom they lived.

His grandfather, a gunsmith by trade, was a captain of cavalry in Oliver Cromwell's army, and served with distinction; but later, being displeased with the restoration of the monarchy, which he had helped to overthrow, and having become allied with the society of Friends, on the emigration of their great leader, William Penn, he followed, or rather went with him, and settled near Philadelphia, where later the subject of our sketch was born.

Very early in life, Rush must have given evidence of his desire for knowledge, and was fortunate in possessing a mother of discernment and force of character, for when he was six years old, his father, a highly respected farmer, died, and the farm on which they lived not being sufficiently remunerative, it was sold and the mother moved into Philadelphia, where her sole aim was the care and education of her son. For three years she taught him herself, but his abilities demanding more than his mother could give, young Benjamin at nine years of age was sent to his uncle in Maryland, and for five years his education was superintended with great care, and he showed far more than an ordinary bright intellect. At the age of fourteen, Rush entered upon a two years' course of study in Princeton College, where he graduated with the degree of B. A. He then commenced the study of medicine, having as a preceptor Dr. Redman, of Philadelphia, and here Rush studied so hard and constantly that he is said to have taken only two days' vacation during the six years he was studying the works of Hippocrates, Sydenham and Boerhaave.

At this time Dr. Shippen began the first course of lectures on medicine ever delivered in the colonies, and young Rush attended these lectures in addition to his other work.

At length, having completed his apprenticeship, and in fact having acquired all his teachers were able to impart, and thirsting for more knowledge, like the true student he was, Rush went to Scotland and entered the Medical College of Edinburgh, which was then the most celebrated school in all Europe, having among its professors such famous men as Cullen, Black, Gregory and Munro, all of whom were Rush's teachers. In two years he obtained his degree of M. D., his thesis, "De coctione ciborum," written in the most elegant Latin, arousing widespread and very favorable comment. Still not satisfied, the young doctor studied in the hospitals of London and Paris something over a year before he turned homeward.

Back in Philadelphia, he found his fame as a student had been before him, and honors came thick and fast. His former teacher, Dr. Shippen, with Drs. Bond, Kuhn and Morgan, were just starting a medical college, and Dr. Rush, at 26 years of age, was at once elected Professor of Chemistry.

In 1789 he was elected Professor of Theory and Practice of Medicine, and in 1791 Professor of Institutes of Medicine and of Clinical Practice. In 1806 these chairs were combined, and Dr. Rush ably discharged the increased duties until his death.

Almost as soon as Rush landed on his return from Europe, he took prominent part in politics, and became a warm friend of Benj. Franklin.

In 1774, with James Pemberton, Dr. Rush started the first Anti-Slavery

Society in America and was its first secretary; he was a member of the famous Continental Congress of 1776, and not only strongly advocated, but signed the glorious Declaration of Independence.

In 1777 Dr. Rush was Surgeon and Physician-General of the Revolutionary Army, and was the trusted friend of the immortal George Washington; but being unable to stop the frauds that were being perpetrated upon the soldiers in the hospital stores, he resigned his post.

His duties were not so arduous but that the Constitution of Pennsylvania was materially changed, owing to a series of letters he wrote at this time.

Dr. Rush was a member of the convention which drafted the Federal Constitution, and after the political crisis of 1787 he gave up his public life entirely and turned his energies to the practice of his profession.

During this time Dr. Rush's pen had not been idle, and he became a prolific contributor to medical literature, his writings being on a great variety of subjects, including, "Language," "Study of Latin," "The Moral Faculty," "Capital Punishment," "Medicine among the Indians," "Maple Sugar," "The Blackness of the Negro," "Tobacco Smoking," "Cause of Animal Life," "Spirit Drinking," and a greater list of more strictly professional topics.

His last work was an elaborate work on "The Diseases of the Mind." Epidemics, and particularly yellow fever, occupied a great deal of his thoughts, and his best work is thought to have been done in regard to these subjects.

In 1793, during the terrible epidemic of yellow fever in Philadelphia, Dr. Rush's energy was tremendous, visiting, it is said, 120 patients daily, and by his bold method of blood-letting, is said to have saved the lives of over 6,000 patients. As might be supposed, Dr. Rush's fame became as great as his energy was untiring, and his house was continually crowded with clients from all parts of the country.

Dr. Rush was above the middle stature, slender and well formed, his mouth and chin good, his nose aquiline, his eyes blue, and his forehead high and prominent. His powerful intellect and high thoughts were indicated by his commanding and prepossessing features. His character was pure, his heart overflowing with kindness. It is said he often gave to charity more than his income. His habits were temperate, his dress neat, his manner courteous and modest, his conversation entertaining.

Dr. Rush was married in January, 1776, to a daughter of Judge Stockton, of New Jersey, by whom he had thirteen children, one of whom became Secretary of the Treasury.

Dr. Rush was taken sick with typhus fever, and after an illness of five days' duration, he died on April 19, 1813, in the 68th year of his age.

The announcement of his death created great sorrow. Funeral services were preached in all parts of the country and multitudes followed him to his grave.

In the service of his country and in the practice of his profession, Dr. Rush reaped the full measure of glory.

“He was a man whose liberal mind
Wished general good to all mankind,
Who when his friend, by fortune's wound,
Fell tumbling headlong to the ground,
Could meet him with a warm embrace,
And wipe the tears from off his face.”

Daniel Brainard, M. D.

Founder and
First President of

Biographical Sketch

ON the 15th of May, 1812, there was born a boy in Oneida County, New York, who was destined to become a great factor in the medical education of the West. His parents were well educated and devoted all their energies to the betterment of their son. His name was Daniel Brainard. From childhood he was devoted to his studies, and received a good common school and academic education, which laid the foundation for that exact and careful investigation which characterized his after life. Having chosen the medical profession as his life's work, he began his medical studies at Whitesboro, New York, where he read for two years under a preceptor. He then attended a medical college in New York city one year, and the next year was graduated from Jefferson Medical College, in 1834.

The two years following his graduation he was engaged in teaching and did not practice his profession to any extent. He delivered a series of lectures on Anatomy and Physiology before the members of the Oneida Institute. He also devoted some time to the study of Latin and French, becoming a proficient scholar in each, which was a great help to him when he went abroad to study.

In the Spring of 1836 he commenced practice in Whitesboro, New York. Soon tiring of the East, he came to Chicago in the Fall of the same year. His medical career in Chicago was begun by hanging his shingle on the door of the law office of his friend, the Hon. J. D. Caton. The first year of his practice was confined to the poorest classes, but he never refused a call, although there was no likelihood of a monetary remuneration. He waited patiently for an opportunity to place himself among a better class of patients, and at last it came, when he successfully performed a hip-joint amputation; proving the necessity for it by first amputating the limb below the trochanters, and finding the products of degeneration in the medullary canal, his counselors having taken the ground that the hip-joint amputation was not necessary. This operation gave him a reputation, as it was among the first ever performed in this country.

In 1839 he visited Paris, and for two years availed himself of the great advantages offered there for medical research and clinical observation. On his return he delivered a course of lectures on anatomy in the University of St. Louis, and in 1842 he was elected to the chair of Anatomy in that university.

Shortly after this he perfected his plans for the founding of Rush Medical College, and on December 3d, 1843, before twenty-two students, he delivered his introductory lecture, and from this humble beginning has grown the largest and most proficient medical college in this country.

In 1852 he again visited Paris, and at this time he obtained the rarely-granted permission to prosecute his researches on the subject of poisoned wounds by the aid of experiments on the reptiles in the Jardin des Plantes; and was elected an honorary member of the Société de Chirurgie of Paris, and of the Medical Society of the Canton of Geneva.

In May of 1854, the American Medical Association offered a prize for the best essay on some medical subject of interest, which he won with his essay on the treatment of ununited fractures and deformities.

During the administration of Pierce he was appointed surgeon to the Marine Hospital, of Chicago, which position he held until his death. In 1847 the first general hospital in Chicago was erected through the instrumentality of Dr. Brainard. It was a two-story structure, containing two hundred beds.

In the Fall of 1866, during an epidemic of cholera in the city, Dr. Brainard contracted the dread disease, and in the space of a few short hours had passed away. In him Rush lost one of her mightiest workers. As a man, he was tall, vigorous in frame, with keen, penetrating eyes and a kindly expression. To a great many he appeared cold and reticent at times, and many thought him hard-hearted; but this rapidly wore away when you became acquainted with the man. He was kind to the poor, hated dishonesty, and above all things despised a man who, after having graduated, would quit study and never make an effort to rise above the ordinary routine of his every-day work. He was particularly friendly to the students of his classes, and many a one has been thus helped on to success by his kind words and deeds of assistance.

As a scholar he was thorough, painstaking and exact. He was a master of many of the collateral branches of science. He was a botanist and a geologist; he also excelled in literature, and his contributions to medical periodicals are, many of them, masterpieces of terse, vigorous and lucid expression.

As a surgeon, he did not hesitate to perform all the great operations of his day. While he was a bold operator, he was cautious, and always refused to operate where he was not justified in so doing.

He was not a specialist, and his work embraced the whole broad domain of surgery. He had not only a Chicago, but an American, not only an American, but a foreign reputation; and he took rank with such men as Parker, Post and Gross. Should some chronicler gather up the names of the most distinguished surgeons, the name of Brainard would be found the peer of Astley Cooper, Hunter and the elder and younger Larreys.

It was said in his funeral oration: "The profession which he adorned will miss his voice. The college of his love will sorrow over its bereavement; and we stand silent and humbled when we think that he who had met and conquered death so many times for others, who was so fully armed with every weapon which could ward off from man the arrows of the destroyer, to whom so many grateful hearts among poor and rich turn as their preserver from a premature grave, should be forced to throw down his arms, and in a few swift hours bend his neck to the blow of resistless death."

“In labors great, in knowledge deep,
His work well done — let Brainard sleep;
Erect his tomb hard by the lake,
Where waves on waves resounding break,
And chant upon the shelly shore
His requiem forever more.”

SAMUEL O. DUNCAN.

CHICAGO'S LATIN QUARTER.

Chicago's Latin Quarter

HIS name is very appropriately applied to that part of Chicago immediately surrounding the Cook County Hospital, and it is there that the embryonic "Doc." flourishes in all his glory.

This district contains many fine buildings, the more important of which our artist has attempted to illustrate on the opposite page. While it resembles in many respects the Quartier Latin of Paris, it is morally far superior to that famous hot-bed of learning; the Chicago grisette being too expensive a luxury for the average student of medicine. Those few of romantic temperament are wont to stroll down Madison street, where the deficiency is not so noticeable.

Our enterprising manager has discovered (and intends to make use of his discovery when the next Larned degeneration has become more evident) that here, within the radius of a few blocks, a boy or girl intended for a medical career may receive their entire education. Commencing at the Marquette school, the child has instilled into him the fundamental principles of learning (and deviltry), and then enters the West Division High School, where he becomes slightly conversant with the sciences (and the girls). He is now ready to begin his medical studies and matriculates at Rush; or, if a girl, at the College of Physicians and Surgeons; or, if a lad of ordinary promise, he might branch off to dentistry and enter the Chicago College of Dental Surgery. After graduation, he is eligible to the position of interne in Cook County or Presbyterian Hospitals. "Many are called (or, at least, think they are), but few are chosen." If he wishes to perfect himself in any special line of work, he may take a course in the Post-Graduate College.

The more prominent institutions comprising the "quarter" are :

The Instructors of the College, feeling that abler efforts could be made as a body than as single individuals, have formed an Association, and have elected the following officers:

President, JOHN EDWIN RHODES, M. D.

Vice-President, D. D. BISHOP, M. D.

Sec'y and Treasurer, SAMUEL C. BEACH, M. D.

Executive Committee, { HAROLD N. MOYER, M. D., Chairman.
JOHN EDWIN RHODES, M. D.
D. D. BISHOP, M. D.

The following Constitution was adopted:

Name

The Association shall be called Instructor's Association of Rush Medical College.

Objects

The improvement of instruction by the co-operation of its members, and the discussion of methods of teaching.

To bring about a closer relationship between the Executive Faculty and the teaching force of the College.

To stimulate interest in the work of the College, and incite to the highest proficiency in individual work.

Membership

Membership of this Association shall include all instructors and teachers of Rush Medical College not on the Executive Faculty.

Dues

There shall be no dues, all incidental expenses being met by special provision by the Association, on recommendation of the Executive Committee.

Meetings

Meetings shall be held in the Laboratory Building of Rush Medical College when called by the Executive Committee, unless otherwise provided for by the Association.

Officers

The officers of the Association shall be a President, Vice-President, Secretary and Treasurer, and an Executive Committee of three. These shall be elected yearly, and shall hold their offices for one year.

The Clinics.

AFTER the medical student has completed his elementary and laboratory work, he is introduced to disease at the bedside of the patient—the clinic.

A clinic means instruction given at the bedside, or in our more modern methods, means the study of disease as illustrated by cases in the amphitheatre. The value of clinical instruction can hardly be exaggerated. It far overshadows didactic lectures, and in some institutions has entirely supplanted them. At Rush the value of limited didactic work is still recognized. It affords the instructor an opportunity of giving a syllabus of his subject; but clinical work is given the more prominent position. Lasting impressions of great value to the young graduate are photographed on his mind at the clinic.

It is at the clinic that he sees and learns to interpret the gait of locomotor ataxia, the gestures of chorea, the cachexia of carcinoma, the deformity of Colles' fracture, the emphysematous chest with its labored breathing, the pallor of chlorosis, the puffy eyelid of the nephritic. It is in the clinic that he sees practiced the art of medicine, the exhaustive cross-examination of the patient, the searching investigation, the judicial diagnosis, the scientific treatment, the skilled handling of instruments. The clinic is the stage upon which he sees performed the part which he hopes to play in his life's work. The importance of a medical school can be best judged by its clinics. At Rush the amount of clinical material afforded by the Central Free Dispensary, by the Presbyterian Hospital and by the college clinics is greater than can be utilized.

The largest surgical clinic in the world, both in point of attendance and number of cases operated upon, can be seen at Rush. The immediate connection with the Presbyterian Hospital makes it possible to present all classes of cases in the large amphitheatre of the college, which has a seating capacity of five hundred.

The gynecological clinics, the medical clinics, and clinics in special branches—eye and ear, chest and throat, skin and venereal, and diseases of children—afford unsurpassed opportunities for the study of disease both to the student and post-graduate.

The PULSE presents this year photographs of the clinics of Professors Senn, Etheridge, Bridge and Hamilton.

Prof. Senn's Surgical Clinic

HE clinic conducted on Tuesday afternoon from two to four, and upon Thursday from two to six, is the greatest surgical clinic in the world.

Its preëminence lies, first, in Dr. Senn as an accurate diagnostician and conscientious though brilliant operator; second, in Professor Senn as a profound scholar, a careful pathologist, an enthusiastic and original investigator and voluminous author; third, in his power not only of comprehending the whole realm of medicine and surgery, and of retaining it at his instant command, but of possessing a practical insight into the wants of students, and the ability to drive home the essentials with a rare forcefulness of manner and directness and fluency of speech; fourth, the superiority of the clinic is also dependent upon the great amount and variety of its clinical material, with every attendant advantage of one of the best of modern hospitals and a large supply of out-patients. Few are the surgical lesions, even of rare interest, that are not exhibited from this inexhaustible clinical reservoir.

The excellence of the clinic is much enhanced by the efficiency of the corps of assistant physicians and nurses, who perform their several duties with precision.

The preparation and aseptic manipulation of sponges, drainage tubes and other paraphernalia; the very admirable handling and care of all instruments; all these procedures move like clock-work, the mainspring and regulator of which are in one individual at the center of activity.

Cleanliness, in the strict modern sense, the watchword in this arena, is a lesson never to be forgotten by those who observe the method by which it is attained, and the clinical results which are its just reward.

The first hour is usually devoted to the presentation of the patients operated upon during the previous week or so. This is a most valuable sequel to the preceding clinic, and is a practical demonstration of results.

The so-called consulting staff of students, appointed from the senior class to exhibit certain patients before the class, is at first thought to be sincerely pitied, as its members pass one by one under the combined gaze of some fourteen hundred eyes and the fire of Dr. Senn's rigid cross-examination; but the immense opportunity which it affords the Professor of impressing important facts is only equaled by the certainty that no student who has undergone the ordeal will ever forget the points brought out.

Finally, a feature worthy of special mention is the running description, precise and deliberate, of every step in each operation, be it ever so intricate or serious. Though there is ample opportunity to see what is done, one has only to listen and to jot down the many practical points in pathology, diagnosis, prognosis or operative procedure which are the fruit of indefatigable labor, long experience and mature thought.

DR. A. M. CORWIN.

The Gynecological Clinic

HIS clinic was inaugurated by Dr. Etheridge in 1889, when he was elected to the chair of Gynecology, and since that time has formed a distinctive feature of the teaching in that great branch of healing. Properly speaking, it is a Gynecological Surgical Clinic, and in it every year are performed almost every surgical procedure for the relief of diseases peculiar to woman. A prominent feature of the clinic is the large number of laparotomies, which is the largest of any clinic in America, comprising every operation on the uterus and appendages from Cæsarian section to simple hysterorrhaphy. Scarcely a clinic goes by without an abdominal section, and several clinics have seen three, while on occasions the time has been too short to operate on the waiting fourth.

Lacerated perinei and cervices, carcinomata, fistulæ, prolapsus uteri, endometritis, metritis, receive their proper operative treatment, and many minor operations are demonstrated, the knowledge of which is indispensable to the general practitioner.

Not only the operations, but the antiseptic preparations, are thoroughly and exhaustively discussed, the history of each case presented, and all the technique of dressing, the treatment of post-operation complications and sequelæ, the removal of sutures, and subsequent precautionary measures are described and explained.

DR. L. C. WEEKS.

Dr. Hamilton's Surgical Clinic

THOROUGH aseptic operations, rapidity of manipulation, and true conservatism, are the characteristic features of this clinic.

Prof. Brainard, who held the chair of Surgery from 1843 to 1867, was the father of the Saturday clinic. It was cradled in his office, where all the operations of the session of '43-'44 were performed.

It is interesting to note how small were the beginnings of this the oldest surgical institution in the city.

The third annual announcement of the college, with evident pride, publishes the fact that during the preceding session thirteen operations had been performed in the clinic, i. e., Removal of Tumors, 3; Removal of Nasal Polypus, 1; Operation for Strabismus, 4; Blepharoplasty, 1; Obstruction of Lachrymal Duct, 1; Tonsilectomy, 1.

After the death of Prof. Brainard in 1867, Prof. Moses Gunn was called to fill the vacant chair, and to this great surgeon is due the honor of having given the clinic a national reputation; of having made it an institution which drew its clientele from all parts of the country. Those who once saw him will never forget his appearance; a large man, with keen blue eyes and white flowing hair, an imposing figure indeed as he entered the arena exactly at two o'clock, (we used to call him the minute gun on account of his promptness,) followed by his corps of assistants, and with a rapidity and dexterity unequalled performed operation after operation.

His death in 1887, of a disease which he had himself so often relieved, was a blow from which Old Rush could hardly have rallied, had she not had among her sons Dr. Charles T. Parkes, Professor of Anatomy.

Under the management of Prof. Parkes the clientele became so large that Saturday afternoon was too short, and first Tuesday and finally Thursday afternoons were set aside to accommodate the large amount of material which poured in from all parts of the United States.

After the sudden death of Prof. Parkes in 1891, the Saturday clinic was left without a head, and the Faculty naturally turned to Surgeon-General John B. Hamilton, an alumni of Rush, a man not only of American but international reputation, who has been repeatedly recognized for distinguished public services rendered; a man whose personality is such as to gain the confidence of all his colleagues, and whose reputation is such as to assure the permanence and development of the Saturday clinic.

Nine hundred and sixty-four surgical cases were operated on in this clinic from June, 1891, to April, 1894.

WM. B. MARCUSSON, A. M., M. D.,
Chief Assistant to the Saturday Clinic.

The Medical Clinic

THE illustration furnishes sufficient evidence of the observance at Rush of two great principles necessary to a correct understanding of medicine: that theory should be practically applied, and that such appliance should be at the hands of consummate ability.

The bi-weekly clinic in medicine, presided over by the eminent Professors Norman Bridge, A. M., M. D., and Henry M. Lyman, A. M., M. D., both of whom are leaders in their profession and of universally recognized ability, provide the student with the best possible advantages in practical medicine.

Then, too, the personal attention that is paid each student in these clinics is of no mere consideration. Here he begins his practice, and is placed on his own resources in the responsibility of diagnosing and stating the treatment of cases given to his charge, all of which is subject to the corrections of his fellow class-mates and the prudent criticism of his instructors.

Being conscious of this position, he is taxed to his utmost to be above suspicion from his class, and exempt from the exceptions of his professors.

This method of instruction furnishes a drill in which not only quick accuracy is acquired, but the aptitude of imparting one's own thoughts to others in a clear, concise and acceptable way.

The reputation of this clinic furnishes it with an exhaustless supply of patients, many of whom are of a superior and private class from the Presbyterian Hospital, while others are from the Free Dispensary, all of whom gather without number within "Old Rush," whose walls were reared and "Dedicated to the quest of knowledge that will relieve suffering and prolong life."

Prof. Gunn's Surgical Clinic

I KNEW Dr. Gunn's clinic when it was in the transition period from the septic to the aseptic condition. Carbolic acid was being used freely. You could tell a clinic assistant, for his hands were shriveled up from five per cent. and he smelled of iodoform. "I don't know much about the truth or falsity of the statements concerning bacteria," Dr. Gunn would say; "but I do know that if I wash my hands and wash my patient and my instruments, and use carbolic acid and iodoform, I can accomplish results that I never dreamed of fifteen years ago."

The clinic was chiefly the ambulatory clinic. The Presbyterian Hospital was beginning to furnish a case or two occasionally, and we began to have a foretaste of what we saw realized later in the hospital surgical clinic, of the gigantic proportions it assumed under Prof. Parkes and his successors.

The best clinical surgical teaching ever done in Rush College is being done to-day. But the practical value of the clinical cases we saw in Dr. Gunn's clinic is not to be underestimated. To see the case come before the Professor and the class, new to both; to hear him extract the history in his quick, energetic way, make his diagnosis, and give advice as to treatment; to see the patient put to sleep, the operation performed, the patient recover from the anæsthesia, all perhaps in the course of thirty or forty minutes, was a lesson in rapid practical surgery not to be forgotten.

Dr. Gunn was always on time. Only once do I remember his being late. We assistants looked at our watches in astonishment, for it was two minutes past two. Just then we heard a blowing and puffing in the hall, and Dr. Gunn, with a very red face, rushed by us into the arena, the while cursing the swing bridges over the Chicago river that had detained him. He was gruff and touchy all that clinic hour. He couldn't bear to be a single minute late.

To his assistants Dr. Gunn was ever courteous and kind if they did their duty. Any neglect was promptly reprimanded. He was rapid as an operator. He liked to have a patient stand an operation without anæsthesia. When such an operation was to be done, the assistants knew that things must go without a hitch. It meant as rapid an operation as Moses Gunn could perform, so as to save the patient as much suffering as possible. Woe to the man who was not ready when the forceps or scissors or ligature was called for. "———," said he to one of the assistants, "don't ever hand me as dull a knife again; I could ride from here to Boston and back again on that knife without a saddle." The assistant never gave him a dull knife again.

The clinics in those days varied in size. On a rainy day scarcely a patient; on a fair day, an overflowing clinic. When the last patient had gone, whether the clinic had lasted ten minutes or two hours, Dr. Gunn always turned to the class and said, "That is all for to-day, gentlemen."

Those of us who were under Moses Gunn, and particularly those who had the privilege of assisting him in his clinical work, feel that we owe a great deal to him, for he taught us sound surgical knowledge, sound practical surgery. He taught us the value of clean-cut rapid work, the value of time in an operation. He taught us, in addition, the value of promptness, of courtly bearing, of honorable treatment of professional brethren, the value of positiveness of opinion, of honest confession of ignorance, of manly conduct in all things.

LABORATORY OF CHEMISTRY

LABORATORY OF BACTERIOLOGY

Laboratory of Chemistry, Pharmacy and Toxicology

THE Chemical Laboratory occupies the whole of the third floor of the new building (100x45 feet), and has accommodations for almost two hundred students.

Since it is the outcome of much experience, careful investigation and planning on the part of Prof. Haines, one would naturally expect to find it a model laboratory, and such it is acknowledged to be by those best fitted to judge.

The ceiling is high, and desks and other woodwork are of pine with hard oil finish; this, combined with an abundance of light from windows opening north, south and east, make every one of the 192 desks a desirable place to work.

Aside from the main laboratory, Prof. Haines has two rooms in the southeast corner fitted up for his own private use, and it is there he carries on his various investigations.

Taken altogether, the Chemical Laboratory, although not the most expensive, is one of the most complete and convenient that can be found anywhere in the country.

Bacteriological Laboratory

The room devoted to this department is 42x27 feet in size and well lighted. There are private desks and lockers for fifty men to work in one class. In a smaller room are similar desks where ten students pursuing special work can be accommodated. The laboratory is well supplied with all necessary apparatus, including sterilizers, incubators, oil immersion objectives, etc. Each student is supplied with the outfit required for the work of the course.

The aim in the course work is to give such knowledge that the student may prosecute the study further at his leisure, but more especially that he may be able to apply this knowledge into the various branches of pathology and practical medicine. This may be accomplished if he obtains a clear idea of bacteria as causes of disease, and the measures to be employed in prophylactic and curative efforts.

The work is not simply demonstrations, but each step is carried out by the individual students. Considerable time is spent on technique, on preparation of various nutrient media, principles of sterilization, staining processes, preparation of plates and rolls, etc. A thorough systematic study of a few bacteria is made, notes and drawings being prepared on the same. Of the pathogenic bacteria only the most common are studied, and preferably those whose recognition is of practical value in diagnosis, i. e., bacillus tuberculosis, gonococcus, bacillus diphtheriæ. The bacillus of typhoid fever is compared with the colon bacillus, and the spirillum of Asiatic cholera with those resembling it.

The bacillus diphtheriæ is studied on various media for its varying morphology, and the diagnosis by the use of Loeffler's blood serum mixture is demonstrated.

The class works six hours a week for six weeks. The laboratory is in charge of GEO. H. WEAVER, M. D., assisted by W. C. F. WITTE and J. H. NICHOLS.

LABORATORY OF HISTOLOGY AND PATHOLOGY

LABORATORY OF MATERIA MEDICA

Histological and Pathological Laboratory

The classes in Histology devote the first few weeks to the study of fresh teased tissues, as well as some of the commoner foreign substances occasionally found in specimens, as wool and cotton fibres.

When familiarity with the microscope has been attained, and a knowledge of elementary tissues, as fibrous tissues, bone, cartilage, blood, etc., the study of more complex structures is undertaken.

Each member of the class mounts fifty specimens. These have been stained in bulk and cut in paraffine.

Many of these sections are from injected unstained tissues, and are utilized to teach the vessel distribution. In some double injection has been done, whereby arteries appear red and veins blue.

These sections cover all the important organs and structures, and many of those of less importance.

Instruction is so arranged that it shall go hand in hand with lectures on Physiology. In this method function and minute anatomy are obtained together.

The size of the classes (forty to sixty) has so far prohibited further instruction in technique, but each class is shown apparatus and the methods used in the preparation of specimens.

The course lasts throughout the year, each class working two hours a week.

Drawing, while requested, is not made a special feature of the work. It is valuable to impress the mental picture obtained.

Especial stress is laid upon landmarks of different tissues, so that proficiency in the identification of tissues can be obtained.

All Freshmen are urgently requested to take the course in Histology the first year, as the early knowledge of minute anatomy is a valuable basis to many other branches of medicine.

The work in microscopical Pathology, like that in Histology, extends throughout the year.

Fifty sections from tissues that were imbedded unstained in celloiden are stained by each member of the classes and mounted. The method of staining is the double Hæmatoxylin and Eosin, with acid alcohol to destain.

The first of these specimens are used to teach general pathology, a thorough systematized knowledge of this being the one object kept in view throughout the course. The latter part of the course comprises: (1) Examination of sections from special lesions that bear upon internal medicine, i. e., typhoid ulcer, unresolved pneumonia, etc. (2) The microscopical study of tumors, many varieties being examined. (3) Microscopical urinalysis taken in connection with the study of morbid Histology of the kidney.

No one is supposed to take Pathology unless well grounded in Histology.

The laboratories are in charge of E. R. LE COUNT, M. D., and D. D. BISHOP, M. D. assisted by J. C. VAN NEYS, '97; A. BRENNER, '96; T. H. PAGE, '97; C. H. WILLIAMS, '97; J. D. FREEMAN, '97, and DR. J. C. WILLIAMS.

Materia Medica Laboratory

The Materia Medica Laboratory was fully equipped by the college authorities for the session of 1894-95, and thereby one more step in teaching by means of practical work was taken by "old Rush."

There is desk room for sixty students, giving each a separate set of the apparatus necessary for the work to be done.

A scale-table containing twenty prescription balances, each furnished with a set of dry and metric weights, has also been provided.

Each member of the Freshman class works in the laboratory two hours per week throughout the term. The work consists of handling the prepared and crude drugs, thereby familiarizing the student with their physical properties; making some of the simpler pharmaceutical preparations; writing prescriptions, thus giving practice in the proper form of a prescription, the official names and their proper abbreviations, incompatibilities of all kinds, compounding prescriptions of all classes.

The laboratory instructors are J. A. PATTON, B. S., M. D., as demonstrator, assisted by S. C. BEACH, M. D.; J. C. GILL, M. D.; E. B. HUTCHINSON, M. D.; WM. R. PARKES, M. D., G. W. HALL, M. D.; and C. A. WADE, M. D.

The Dissecting Room

THE dissecting room at Rush College is one of the largest and best equipped in the country; the only one which can compare with it is the dissecting room of the medical department of Columbia University.

The room, forty-five by one hundred feet, is on the top floor of the new laboratory building; is entirely cut off from the rest of the building, and is reached only by an open air iron balcony. The room is lighted from above. In connection with the main room are several smaller rooms for operative surgery on the cadaver, demonstrating, and cloak room and lavatory. The floor is asphalt, so laid as to provide for drainage. The dissecting tables are made of iron with glass top, an innovation which has proven a great success. While the room is large enough to permit of having fifty tables in service, as a rule, not more than forty are used. The walls are covered with anatomical charts, a large number being in oil. The room is in charge of Prof. BEVAN, and the demonstrators of anatomy, Drs. PARKER, SHAW, LE COUNT and WEEKS; it is open from 1 to 5. In connection with the anatomical department, and in the rear of the laboratory building, is a modern refrigerating plant and preparing room. In the good old days when it was necessary to "obtain" cadavers, when the dissecting was done by gas or candle-light, when the subject was so illy preserved that bad tobacco in an old pipe was a perfume, it was indeed an initiation when the student saw for the first time the dissecting room. Although a wise anatomical act, day-light dissections, refrigerated and well injected material, have robbed the dissecting of much of its old impressiveness, it still remains the student's initiation into the mysteries of medicine.

Ancient Order of Ananias

THIS fraternity first made its appearance at Rush in the term of '93 and '94.

Its object is for the betterment of its members socially and scientifically, thus paving the way to future professional success.

The work of the order proved so markedly beneficial to its members as students and afterward as practitioners, that it was considered a good thing to perpetuate, and so it has become one of the permanent organizations of the college.

That all assertions are false until proven true, and that falsity is the bane of life, constitutes the working field of the association. Acting upon this principle socially, fraternally, scientifically and intellectually, its members have acquired methods of investigation and an independent individuality which should lead to the highest attainments in the science of medicine.

Within the lodge-room of the A. O. A. scientific truths are unfolded, medical teachings subjected to the search-light of reason, pathological manifestations interpreted and the phenomena of life judiciously considered.

The sessions are characterized by instructive discourse, equity and recreation:

“Every moment alters what is done,
And innovates some act till then unknown.”

Progression, independence, knowledge and truth are the cardinal virtues of the organization. Among the qualifications required for membership in this fraternity are good moral character, common sense, two courses of lectures of eight months each, and the ability to think and act for yourself.

The officers are twelve in number, and are elected according to their proficiency in special branches of medicine as required in the performance of the duties of the different offices.

1893

DR. EDWARD H. TINEN

1894

DR. LAWRENCE RYAN

and a duplicate to

DR. WILLIAM J. BUTLER

The Daniel Brainard Medal

A gold medal is annually given by the Faculty to that student, taking no other prize, who shall make and present to the College Museum the best accepted dissection in Surgical Anatomy, and has been awarded to:

1893

DR. OTTO B. BOCK

1894

DR. FRANK BYRNES

J. W. Freer Medal

THE FREER prizes were founded in the year 1894 by the generosity of MR. NATHAN M. FREER, of the Board of Trustees of the College, as a memorial of the late DR. J. W. FREER, once a member of the Faculty, and of MR. L. C. P. FREER, who was for a long period of his life a member of the Board of Trustees.

The prizes are secured by the income from two thousand dollars, and are offered each year to the senior and junior classes of the College respectively. The first prize in the Senior class is a medal of the value of thirty dollars, with a finely executed head of DR. J. W. FREER on the obverse. The inscription on the reverse reads: "Ob animum studiis rei medicæ exercendis deditissimum," with a space in the centre for the name of the recipient. The second prize is twenty dollars in money. The subjects for competition are annually announced soon after the close of the Christmas holidays, and are not connected with the subjects on which the class is examined for graduation.

THE RECIPIENTS OF THESE PRIZES HAVE BEEN:

C. D. CENTER—First Prize

A. F. STEWART—Second Prize

1895

A. T. HOLBROOK—First Prize

S. ZELTNER—Second Prize

The L. C. P. Freer Medal

THE first prize for the Junior Class is a medal of the value of thirty dollars, with the head of MR. L. C. P. FREER on the obverse, the inscription and arrangement of the reverse being the same as that of the first prize offered the Senior class. The second of the Junior prizes is twenty dollars given in money.

The subjects of the Freer prizes are offered in successive years by the several chairs represented in the Faculty, and in the order of the seniority of these chairs, and on subjects taught by each Professor. The Senior prizes are offered and awarded by Professors lecturing before that class, and on subjects taught by them, and the Junior prizes in course by the several Professors engaged in the instruction of that class.

THE RECIPIENTS OF THESE PRIZES HAVE BEEN:

1894

T. R. WELCH — First Prize

K. B. BARTHOLOMEW — Second Prize

History

THAT HISTORY repeats itself is very liable to be verified when three histories of the Class of '95 are called for within fourteen months.

But the "Pulse Board" say that they must have something from us or they will write us up themselves, and you know that it would not be well to allow ourselves to be written up by such partial individuals.

The innovations made by our class during the first two years have already been chronicled in a previous history. The innovation of greatest magnitude was the publishing of the PULSE, volume one, which has since been voted a success by Faculty, students and alumni.

The road was new and untrodden, and while our Board labored earnestly and put out a book which was a measure to their ability, circumstances considered, still we shall take pleasure in congratulating the present Board upon presenting a still better volume, which we believe they will do.

The remainder of the last year passed very rapidly and pleasantly. The thirteen examinations at the end of the term seemed like a Pike's Peak while approaching them, but as we drew nearer they dwindled down and most of the class passed over them safely; some, however, were the victims of the unlucky thirteen, and have sought easier fields of conquest, where "snap" examinations predominate.

Finally, it came to pass that after having toiled two long years in the realm of established facts and present theories, and having reviewed the remains of many exploded theories, we were permitted to enter the field of application—"special courses." Our ranks have not thinned, but instead have become more thronged, students from other institutions having come to join us and enjoy Rush's superior clinics, and secure a diploma from a school of honor.

As a class we have given up rushing in the halls, shouting, "scrapping" and indulging in any of the unnecessary "boistrosities." We have been informed that such things have a bad influence upon patients, and then when we behold and hear the under-classmen, we see as we were seen and can scarcely realize that we were ever so rude. We rejoice that the change has come.

Still, when war is inevitable, we can send to the front a goodly number of volunteers who are willing to sacrifice their own garments, or the lives of their opponents, for the sake of maintaining a principle. Speaking of exploded theories and war, recalls to mind the day when the Class of '96 attempted to sit in the front row, believing themselves to be the equal of their elders. Of course it was but a theory, it exploded and went up, as did they to "the perch," where they have since peaceably remained. They are to be congratulated, however, upon learning a lesson so quickly, and we trust they will find in the Class of '97 as apt pupils as they themselves have been.

We have a first grade Cook County class, and we expect to see them obtain a goodly number of the available positions.

Our class election elicited some interest. Sweet, the Populist, made an historic speech, in which he attempted to show the folly of partisanship and precinct caucusing, but his sentiments were not heeded by the overwhelming opposition, and he sank "truth-crushed-to-earth" like. Notwithstanding the fact that the class were informed by Arthur Tenney, just preceding the election for valedictorian, that H-o-l-b-r-o-o-k spelled Holbrook, the vote spelled C-R-A-I-G in upper-case letters. Craig coming from Kansas, (the state that has produced a Mrs. Lease, a St. John, Simpson and Pepper), could but be a star politician.

Members of '95 have assisted in winning athletic fame for Rush on the diamond and the gridiron; others have assisted in a very creditable way in making the students' concerts a decided success. The principal innovation of this year is the adoption of Cap and Gown, a move in the right direction, and one in which the class were almost a unit. Ours will be the largest class ever graduated from Rush, and the time is near at hand when our pleasant associations here must practically be ended; still it will always be a pleasure, by the aid of memory, to re-live the days spent at "good old Rush."

Class of '96

History

WE, the Class of '96, have passed over half of that long and narrow pathway leading to the much sought for degree of "M. D." This is a mere statement of a fact, and it remains the duty of the historian to tell of the manner in which it has been done.

Now, if this were an ordinary class, it would be a comparatively easy matter; but to relate the many victories, advancements and the results attained by the present "Middle Class" would require volumes, so, therefore, only a few of the notable events of our existence thus far will be recounted.

Before the advent of the Class of '96, athletics at Rush were never a success; but in the Spring of 1894 they were given a great boom by the so-called "D. J.'s," who, with the aid of one or two upper class men, organized a base ball team that met with such great success that we need say no more of it.

That this seed took root was plainly shown in the following Fall, when a foot ball team of no mean ability was put in the field, upon which we were very well represented. Then came in the natural order of sequence the organization of a College Athletic Association, comprising both Faculty, alumni and students.

We would not have you think, however, that the bringing of athletic sports to the front was our only virtue. No, no. In the free dispensary clinics, where the true and earnest student is to be found every afternoon, there we were also, and in a remarkably short space of time our few shining lights, such as Hemingway, Weisskopf and Donahue, soon gained positions of trust and honor as assistants in the various branches in which they shall some day set the medical world on fire.

After the vacation we again assembled in the upper lecture room, as we had done once before; but, alas! we were greatly changed. We had received a new name: collectively, the "Middle Class;" each separately and distinct individual, a "Middler." As to the true significance of that word, only a "D. J." can tell. Many were missing, never to return, having gone to other institutions of knowledge, or perhaps had ceased the study of medicine entirely, for reasons best known to themselves. These places, however, were nearly all filled by new members from neighboring colleges, and our most worthy Senior class was quite generous in helping us replete our numbers.

Then, too, when taken as a whole, we were different in other ways. The "freshness" and "greenness," which was such a prominent feature in our make-up a year previous, was now conspicuous for its absence, (even "Tillie" Schramm was quiet, at least quieter). Possibly our change in this may be accounted for by the fact that, when contrasted with the same properties of the present Freshman class, we had faded into insignificance.

We here diverge to mention the attack of diabetes mellitus with which Green suffered during his laboratory work in urinalysis. Though severe while it lasted, we rejoice in saying that its duration was short and his recovery soon complete.

Now appears an epoch in the history of the class and college. Through the energies of Mr. J. B. Schreiter, the adoption of a college button, such as a student of Rush need not be ashamed to wear when among other college men; and the issuing by Mr. F. C. Honnold of a college directory, which fills a long-felt want in the every-day life of the student body.

We have had our quota of "pushes and scraps" with both the gay and frivolous freshmen, and the sedate (?) and dignified (?) seniors, and (as is customary with every class) claim as many victories; none, however, so signal as that memorable one upstairs, in which the seniors found it necessary to seek a Faculty dispensation before they could safely and peaceably occupy the front rows and eye the "leather manikin."

Possibly it would be more in place to speak of whisker-growing in connection with seniors; but as some of us seem to have taken work in that course this year, and as "whiskers, perhaps, even more than knowledge are essential to the young doctor," we deem it no more than right to at least mention the work done by some of our members. Wilson carries off all honors by being the proud and only (much to the credit of the class) possessor of a "billy" goatee. Richardson is doing nicely, having passed from mustache to side whiskers (two styles), and is now cultivating a full beard. We wish him success. Dudley's mustache, minute, fuzzy and microscopic, is just about the same. We admire his patience. "Ex-Prexy" Eckard seems to have flunked, and has had them cut off (much to the relief of everyone).

In our class can be found all kinds, as to nationalities, colors, peculiarities, etc., etc., (sex omitted); showing such striking comparisons as Convery and Dvorak; Jacque and Yonan; H. S. Smith and A. L. Smith; Daniels and Hutchins; Dyas and Davidson; and Eddleman, who is a staunch prohibitionist, and is therefore opposed to all forms of levity, having once heard that laughter was intoxicating, and Bading, who is—well, who is not a prohibitionist.

This might be carried on indefinitely, and then we would tell no more than half of this great and glorious "Class of '96."

If this seems short, bear in mind that the PULSE of 1895, as issued by us this year, will stand, if not as a history, as a monument to us for years and years to come.

"Praise from a friend, or censure from a foe,
Are lost on hearers that our merits know."

Class History of '97

TO one who was present at the first assemblage of the class, and who has since occupied his seat as a member thereof, the recollection of our first meeting must needs provoke a smile—yes, a smile of wild chaotic glee. That first meeting portended not at all of what we were to be. It was with solemn step and sober mien we entered the lecture room on that eventful day, and dropping into the first seat which offered itself awaited, Micawber-like, for “something to turn up.” An unwonted solemnity pervaded the room—a solemnity broken only by the swing of the door, followed by the craning of many necks to inspect the new arrival. With the advent of the Professor, a still more oppressive silence reigned. How we hung on his every word!—hung as we never hope to hang again. We fain would have taken notes on the part of his hair or the cut of his whiskerettes, so great our thirst for medic lore. But now, alas! how changed.

For some time we were at a loss to know whom we were. Some said we were Juniors; others said we were Freshmen; others, and the great majority, called us “D. J’s,” if you know what that means. But we did not worry long as to our identity, call us what you like. What matters a name? Certain it is, Rush would not survive many seasons without her “D. J.” class. Behold in us the fountain head, the sine qua non. Handle us gingerly, Mr. Faculty. This side up with care.

Days and weeks rolled round, our verdancy vanished with that of the autumn leaves; our first man had been "passed" to the Perch amid diabolical shrieks, and we soon, like Alexander, wept for new and foreign worlds to conquer. There seemed a superfluity of animal spirits awaiting but the occasion to vent its furor. The occasion came at last. The Middlers, gloating in the realization that they were no longer "D. J's," sauntered one day into our lecture, where, seated high upon the Perch, they settled themselves to beguile the time. But the time needed no beguiling; a whisper, a perceptible commotion, a rush, a scramble, exit Middlers P. D. Q. It has not been our fortune to thus form the acquaintance of the pedantic Seniors, but "while there's life there's hope."

But as to the constituency of '97—a superb mosaic indeed. There are long men and short men, heavy men and feather-weights; men with whiskers, men with none, (not their fault, they try hard enough); men with mustaches and men with countenances unsullied by such appendages; men of luxuriant epicranial growths, and those with bald and barren pates (causes obscure, to say the least); married men and those in single blessedness. Yes—when will wonders end?—we have a real live "Fœtus."

Our class has entered into all the departments of life at Rush with a pleasing zeal and vim. The gridiron has already bespoken the quality of our men, the strongest and sturdiest of this year's team. Soon after the opening of the session a class organization was perfected. The major part of the year has been spent in acquainting ourselves with each other, in learning ourselves individually and collectively. Some have shown marked ability as class leaders, others again as business men; some have arisen pre-eminent as students, others as drones. "Pickun no fightun!" behold herein the essence of our religion; we would live in peace with all men; but woe betide the Middler's Hyperion locks or the Senior's polished tile, if this truce be not honored; it were better for them that said locks had been cropped in infancy and that said tile had perished in embryo.

The history of the Freshman class is brief, but no briefer indeed than its life. No sooner had we congregated than the annals and archives of years gone by shook their dust-begrimed and time-worn parchments, and shoved along to make room for '97. Then and there our History began. Tell us, O Muse, when and where shall it end? The History of this year must be prophetic. What we achieve, what we accomplish, is but a prophecy of what we shall achieve and shall accomplish hereafter. We are truly grateful to Old Rush for the superior advantages we enjoy and are to enjoy. We hope to demonstrate to her that such increased facilities tend but to extend her fame and augment her influence.

The Freshmen

BLOCK — "Rich on poker chips."

BECKER — "The hairs of thy head are all numbered."

DROZIDOWITZ — "A pronounced prodigy with an unpronounceable name."

BATTERMAN } "I do declare that red is the most beautiful color in all the ALDERSON } world."

AUNER — "Oh, Hell! What have we here?"

BIELMEYER — "Huge, wallowing, unwieldy in his gait" (and withal a smiling Papa).

ADAMS — "But what is this? What thing of sea or land?"

BANKS — "Be wise with speed; a fool at forty is a fool indeed."

DAIDGE, (reciting) — "The shoulder has adduction, abduction and deduction."

BOWMAN — "A singer of feline sweetness."

BARRETT — "I am not shaped for sportive tricks."

DONALDSON — "Lean he was as is a rake:
He was not right fat, I undertake."

CURRY — "His ears laugh as his mouth goes by."

BIGLOWE — "The seals of office glitter in his eyes."

DERWENT, (reciting) — "The upper extremity is the head."

DEMAREE — "Each individual hair did stand on end like the quills of a fretful porcupine."

BURTON — "Beauty and brains go not together."

CLAYTON—"Go ask of nature what you are and what she meant to make you."

BOWE—"Thy guessing brings thee naught" (0).

BRUGGE—"He's merry like a cock as thinks the sun arose a purpose to hear him crow."

BROWN—"Happy as a cannibal am I, or as five thousand swine."

HUNT—"So sweet and voluble in his discourse."

FISHER—"His golden curls were hanging down his neck."

GREENIE—"He squanders his time in riotous (?) living."

GORDON—"Of fools the world has such a store,
That he who would not see an ass,
Must bide at home and bolt his door,
And break his looking-glass."

Longbrake—"Who plucked the feathers of this rare bird?"

KREUZER—"Large foot-prints on the sands of time will I leave."

FINDLEY—"But i' faith, I should have been a woman by right."

LUCKEY—"Say, fellows, let me tell you a story."

HUGHES—"For who is he whose face is but enriched with one appearing hair."

LOSEY—"Now let's to billiards."

GIRARD—"He will lie, sir, with such volubility that you would think Truth were a fool."

HALL—"Bashfulness is an ornament to youth."

ELLIS—Wanted—Another case of Budweiser.

GROVE—"Rich on poker chips."

"It is said that "Castor Oil" Hill never 'works'."

Klein is hunting for an Anticus Posticus ligament of the knee joint.

PRICE—Ah, his love for a second-hand smoke.

J. MARTIN—An orator indeed.

MELOY—That pretty curly hair.

J. MANN—Didn't you know he was married?

REINHART—Has no need of a bald-headed wig.

PHILLIPS—We know you can yell.

PICKETT—So you would like a mustache.

PERKINS—Whiskers, call them that if you want to.

MEACHAM—The Duke de la Racine.

MANNING—Authority on anatomy.

PORTERFIELD—Knows a lot, but can't think of it.

McDERMOTT—Traded his whiskers for specs.

REESE—"Just exactly" in it.

McKEE—Has a "nipple."

DR. S.—Where is the distinguishing line between arteries and capillaries?

NICKLESON—Where the arteries leave off and the capillaries begin.

Did you describe "Korysmis?" wise Matthei asked
With the look of a genuine nibs;
But then recollect he has broken his neck
Just "between the third and fourth ribs."

On the perch they love to sit,
Smoking pipe and cigarette;
But in the first and foremost row,

“Use every man after his desert,
And who shall 'scape a grinding?”

— Shakespeare.

(There was no doubt of the class's interest in the announcement.)

A College Tragedy

Again they charged the solid front of the enemy and again were repulsed; but amidst the struggling mass of bleeding humanity was one whose fighting days were o'er. His life blood was ebbing fast. The dying hero faltered; he took his comrade's hand and said, “Tell that dirty coward at left guard that I can lick the ——” but Fullenwider had croaked.

Ah, pensive scholar what is fame?

DR. BROWN—“Mr. Baum, what are the six principal methods of physical examination?”

BAUM, (glibly)—“Inspection, palpitation, auscultation, precussion, menstruation!!”——

DR. SENN—“Well, what does McBurney's point mean?”

HARDING, '95—“Appendicitis!!”

DR. JAY—“As this is a new class, I will ask some gentleman to state how your names run, so that I may put them in my book.”

SENIOR—“From O to Zip!!”

DR. SENN—“What is this condition called?”

HEINAN, '95—“Crypity orchidism!”——

HOW TO ACQUIRE A LUCRATIVE PRACTICE.

The following advice is the result of years of experience and observation on the part of the editor:

Begin during your first year of reading by copying, from your preceptors, the knowing and mysterious air habitual to all doctors. You will probably lose during your first few weeks at college, but can easily pick it up again when you become a senior. While at college, devote your time to acquiring a distinguished and dignified appearance (a la Hemingway). Also familiarize yourself with the intricate workings of that instrument vulgarly known as a pony. As graduation approaches, provide yourself with a pull which will place you in some good hospital, and while there, devote your energies to inspiring awe within the minds of patients, nurses and lower classmen. Nothing, so far known, has been able to inspire awe in the deeply convoluted brain of a senior.

Marry a hen-medic, of ordinary ability, for advice and reference. When you start, start with a rush, and on all occasions impress on the people the idea that you were not made of common clay ( $AC_2(SiO_3)_3$ ) but of the rarer metals. If the foregoing advice is carefully followed, you will find that patients will be more plentiful to you than zeros to Donohue.

The children all cry for it,
 Their mothers would die for it.
 BURNS' TASCORIA is a boon to all.
 Price 25c. a bottle.

Personals.

Dr. Hemingway, the celebrated gynecology specialist, has recently announced to the medical fraternity, that he has been able to plainly distinguish the foetal heart beat as early as the twelfth week of intra-uterine life.

At a recent meeting of the Centrifugal Medical Society, the name of Dr. Grenier, formerly of Rush, '96, was presented for membership, but was rejected. The reason given was that he was what might be called "a medical mugwump."

W. D. Brode, A. M., M. D., D. D., has resigned his position as professor of psychology at the Ladies' Homœopathic College of this city, to become a missionary doctor in Western China. The magnanimity and self-sacrifice of Dr. Brode is wonderful.

The many friends of John Outhet were pained to hear that he was seen in the bald-headed row at Sam T. - Jack's theatre, as he was known to be a highly respected citizen and pillar of the church. Mr. Outhet says he was laboring under an attack of mental aberration, brought on by overwork and study. The sterling character of Mr. Outhet precludes all possibilities of his having entered such a place while in his right mind.

RUSH MEDIC, 2; CHICAGO, O.

The sturdy doctors from Rush defeated the Chicago League team yesterday by a score of 2 to 0. This team is now conceded to be the strongest team, amateur or professional, in the west. The features of yesterday's game were the terrific batting of Schultze Edwards and the phenomenal twirling and all around playing of Andrew Jay.

For Baldness, use Beyer's Restorative. To be taken internally and eternally. Its continued use has been known to grow whiskers on the moon.

Call or address,

C. H. BEYER, 17 S. Green st.

There was a little medic
Lived in this vale of tears,
He rode a "horse" and ne'er got caught
For very many years.
But Kaufman saw that "pony,"
Just as you might expect,
And called that man right "off the perch,"
"And he got it in the neck."

There was a man in section C,
Whose wits were very bright;
He used to "bone" anatomy,
Till far into the night.
He got a mark of 98,
In Osteology;
He kicked and fussed and fumed around
Till he could hardly see.
He took his paper to be changed,
When, strangest to relate,
Dr. Shaw, when he looked it over,
Only gave him 88.

MOFFATT — "Mr. Gould, give me a ticket for Laryngoscope and Ophthalmoscope, please."

BARTHOLOMEW, (in Senn's clinic) — "This patient clumb a tree."

DR. BROWER — "What are your initials?"

O'CONNOR — "I told you once there was only one of that name."

PROF. SALISBURY — "Will the patient always ask for a drink?"

KENAGA, (confidentially) — "Yes, if he can speak English."

HARDING, '95, (in arena) — "Family history good; two brothers living and well; his sister not so well, she is married to a doctor!"

DR. JAY — "Mr. Walters, who instituted the so-called bloodless method of amputation?"

WALTERS, (thoughtfully) — "Let me see. Oh! yes. Bismarck! and —"

(Class laughed.)

WALTERS — "Well, I heard the name somewhere."

DR. JAY — "Yes, in a certain Randolph street restaurant."

NEW MEDIC—"Who is that sweet looking man, with the pretty whiskers, in Dr. Senn's clinic?"

STUDENT—"That? Why, don't you know Moffatt?"

LECTURER, (to medical student)—"This subject's right leg is longer than his left, which causes him to limp. Now, what would you do in such a case?"

STUDENT—"Limp, too, I guess."

DR. SENN—"How would you differentiate between an ovarian cyst and pregnancy?"

KERR—"By history of exposure."

SWAN wrote on the board the following:

"Dr. Jay Andrews will meet his quiz class next hour, having returned from his visit."

DR. MOYER—"Now make an emulsion of iodoform."

ECKARDT, '96—"Shall I make a wet or dry solution, doctor?"

QUESTION—"If you had an inflamed kidney would you give 'dig?'"

PROF.—"I suppose the gentleman means if the patient had an inflamed kidney."

MALAISE — "The feeling which came over Arndt when he sat in the front row and Prof. Bevan commenced to quiz."

PHLEBITIS — "Latin for flea bites."

ANTIMONY — "A diseased condition which prevails in the free dispensary and to an alarming extent among the students."

HAMLET — (Bading's translations) — "Zwei beer, oder zwei beer nicht."

Convery is the owner of a modest piece of jewelry, for it covers its face with its hands and runs down its own works.

While returning to the college last fall, one of our students in a moment of mental abstraction purchased a sleeper ticket; but, to quote his own words, "Sure and oi was so unused to such luxury that oi could no slape a-tall, a-tall."

DR. WEEKS — "What structure forms the roof of the lateral ventricles?"

CROWLEY — "The, ah!!

ARNDT, (in a large whisper) — "The corpus callosum."

CROWLEY — "Oh! yes, yes."

DR. WEEKS — "What is the structure of the cornea, Mr. Bird?"

BIRD — "Why, it's a kind of an opaque, transparent membrane."

DR. LE COUNT — "How are teeth developed, Mr. Stone?"

STONE — "Well, first there is sort of a boil appears, and then there is some epithelium grows up from Meckel's ganglion and forms the teeth."

FISH, (taking history in free dispensary):

"Ever been here before?"

"What is your name?"

"Where were you born?"

"Married or single?"

"Male or female?"

The Senior war cry — "Teacher, I want my seat."

Sophomore's definition for a Senior in two letters — C. D. (seedy).

ODE TO WILSON.

This reverend brother, like a goat,
Did wear a tail upon his throat,
And set in such a curious frame,
As if t'were wrought in filigrane;
Cut so even, as if't had been Drawn with a pen upon his chin.

FOUND — Dissecting case containing a pack of cards (5 aces), a plug of Piper Heidsieck, one scalpel (broken handle), and a hyoid bone, marked S. O. D. on cover.

The Passing Show

THE Co-Eds. gave a benefit concert at the upper amphitheater, in which an assembly of several hundred women, with here and there an equally entertained man, warmly applauded the performers. The proceeds went to buy an overcoat for Mr. A. W.

MONTGOMERY, a worthy member of the middle class. The artists were, MISS KATE CROWLEY, MISS EFFIE WALLACE, MISS TILLIE SCHRAM, MISS MARIE P. O'CONVER, MISS AGGIE SEAGER, MISS GEORGIA SNODGRASS, MISS NOBLE B. FULLENWIDER, MISS OTILL ARNDT, FRAULEIN BÄDING and MME. DANNIELTS.

THE PROGRAMME WAS AS FOLLOWS:

1. Impersonations of Shylock, . . . . . Shakespeare.
MISS TILLIE SCHRAM.
2. SOLO — Sweet Marie, . . . . . Mackie.
MISS MARIE P. O'CONVER.
3. SOLO — You can't play in our back-yard, . . . . . Petrie.
MISS EFFIE WALLACE.
4. RECITATION — Oh, Mrs. Flannigan, what d'ye mean by that?
MISS AGGIE SEAGER.
5. SOLO — Girl wanted, . . . . . 1492.
MISS GEORGIA SNODGRASS.
6. Selection from "The Grand Duchess." . . . .
MISS OTELL ARNDT.
7. SOLO — I'm Mamma's Little Girl, . . . . . Petrie.
MISS NOBLE B. FULLENWIDER.
8. LECTURE — Our Girls need not Marry unless they want to,
MISS KATE CROWLEY.
9. Selection from "Frau, Frau," . . . . .
FRAULEIN BÄDING.
10. SOLO — Rôle d'Equipe, . . . . .
MME. DANNIELTS.

Especially engaged for this performance after having sung 375 nights at the Fred. Wolf Beer Garden.

Roll Call

Section "A," Medicine

(Delinquents accounted for by the Tammany [back row] gang.)

INSTRUCTOR—"Gentlemen, I notice that this little book I have here records not only the intellectual, but also the physical, condition of the class."

Proceeds to call the roll.

*"Old Hundred" Angus.

Here.

"Ducth" Arndt.

T.—In jail.

Prof. Jay Andrews.

T.—Football.

"Filaria" Fitzpatrick.

T.—Senior.

"Omega" First.

Here.

I.—Well. "The first shall be last, and the last shall be first."

So, Mr. First, what is the lesson this morning?

The Regular School vs. Homœopathy

(PRIZE HUMOROUS SKETCH.)

It happened in one of those numerous student boarding houses on Hermitage avenue, and will go down as the classical joke of the year for the "Quartier Latin." Three "homeops" and three Rush men roomed in this joint, and that fact insures that those tobacco-smoked walls have often heard the questions of "similia" and "rationalism" hotly discussed. It was during one of these discussions that a '95 Rush man contemptuously took up the newly filled medicine chest of one of the "homeops," and after removing the "Merry-Christmas-to-Willie-from-Papa" card on it, announced that he was "a bit hungry and thirsty, and had a good mind to eat the contents of the case." "You wouldn't dare to drink a half of that littlest vial of Belladonna," ventured Willie. "Oh, yes, I would," remarked Rush '95. "Get on to this," as he measured off half and downed it. "For Heaven's sake! stop! You'll die!" came en chorus from the "homeops." "Why, that's a pudding," put in another Rush man. "I'll eat every pill there for a nickel." The homeops were about recovered from their shock, and thought that "he had established a tolerance," but that "it was very dangerous." "Well, come," repeated the Rush man, "what'll you bet I can't eat every pill there, and drink every vial in one dose?" "Anything you like, you blamed guy. Here now, shut up or match this ten dollars." Now this happened at the beginning of the month, and miraculously for a Rush man, the tenner was produced, and the book-keeper, who roomed down stairs, was called up to hold the stakes and "see the fun." "He'll be sick before he gets the first down," exclaimed the excited homeop. "Why, really, you mustn't do it. Honestly, they will kill you. Hold on, for goodness sakes! Don't drink that. My God, man, that is poison! Hold him, fellows, don't let him do —." "Say, buckle up, you sugar-pill, you'll spoil my digestion. Down goes the Gelsemium, fifth potential." "This is awful! My Heavens, boys, he'll die!" "Leave him alone, you geese, that's the easiest ten he ever earned." "We must give him an emetic. Don't let him kill himself. Don't be fools." "Say, but that arsenic is good; wish there was more of it." "Never mind, boys, he'll probably vomit it all up. But you're out ten dollars." "Oh, I don't care about that, but he'll surely die. Professor Milk said twenty drops of that arsenic was toxic." "Ah! the last bottle; powder, too. Podophyllin. Well, here's to my liver, long may it wave." And the jumble of remarks stopped, as three pale faces and three red faces turned to the stakeholder and watched him give twenty dollars to one of the red faces.

"Good night, fellows," said the red faces, "we've enjoyed ourselves very much. Wish you had had enough to go 'round." And they took the stakeholder out with them. While they were on their way to the nearest restaurant, they stopped at a drug store and paid a bill that read:

Chicago, Jan. 12, 1895.
Mr. W. H. Lewis, Dr.
To MORTAR PESTLE.
To emptying the homeopathic case, and filling it with non-indicated pills, sugar of milk and tinted water.	40

EDITORS OF THE PULSE:

Gentlemen—The above is based upon truth, and the details alone are fiction. Mr. W. H. Lewis of the senior class was one of the chief actors.

Very respectfully,

"TWELVE."

DR. B.—“Mr. McKelvey, what would you suggest for a dusting powder in this case?”

McK.—“Well, I think that vaseline and boric acid, half and half, would be good.”

DR. B.—“Mr. MacDonald, if you have fever, how do you find the patient?”

MACD.—“With a higher temperature.”

DR. B.—“Yes; but the general condition?”

MACD.—“Oh, of course. Yes; that is, feverish.”

DR. B.—“Certainly. But I mean do we have convulsions or not? Is the skin moist or dry? Is the patient constipated? How is his breathing?”

MACD.—“Yes, sir. It is.”

DR. B.—“What is?”

MACD.—“What you said. His — his breathing.”

PROF. A., (to patient in clinic)—“Do you eat much red meat—beefsteak, mutton chops and such?”

PATIENT—“Naw.”

PROF. A., (to class)—“You see, gentlemen, patients like this often learn what food is good for them, just as this man abstains instinctively from beefsteak.”

PATIENT—“Yes, I knowed it was good fer me, but I ain't got the price of beefsteak.”

The "Practical Courses"

TO do the "Practical Courses" properly one must provide himself with a very indulgent, patient father, plenty of cuss-words and an abundance of wastable time. If you play a stiff game of poker you can dispense with the indulgent father. Having paid the mild forty-dollar ante, you are allowed to draw five cards. Familiarize yourself with the fact, that "these cards are not certificates of work done, but must be exchanged, etc.," and then have a folding-bed put up near the black-board at the college entrance. Go to bed and watch the black-board for notices.

For example: If you hold ticket for "Class 5, in the Practical Course in Bunionology," and the notice reads:

CLASS 5, BUNIONOLOGY,
AT 2 P. M.
STALENWIN.

you can go out and read the newspaper until a quarter before three, when it is well to take your bunionoscope and go to the class-room. It is highly improbable that the instructor will be there that early, but if he is, perspire freely, puff hard, and tell him you came over as rapidly as possible from the class in the "Practical Course in Superfluous Hairology." Then after letting the instructor see you look through the bunionoscope a couple of times, get some friend to answer for you at roll-call and go and play billiards.

The chief benefits of the "Practical Courses" are:

- (1) The ready excuse they give for absence from the regular and impractical courses; and
- (2) The efficient explanation to your father as to the speedy disappearance of the last draft.

They are also a beautiful charity to the corporation of Rush Medical College.

AWARDED FIRST PRIZE.

SITTING on the benches,

Tired of operation,
Glances sort of go
Wandering to the table,
Over on the side—
Pleasant occupation,

Sepsis and the rest,
Tension sutures, drainage,
Sarcoma, cancer-nest;
But looking to the westward,

How to Make a Pulse

AWARDED SECOND PRIZE.

OR the help of our Freshmen, now just beginning
To think about Corpuscles, Pulses and such,
And who doubtless think we are quite wonderful, spinning
Such beautiful rhymes that they surely can't touch;
We'll give a prescription simply infallible,
One that's been proved and is never amiss—
One that we think you will find quite invaluable,
'Tis for the making of Pulses like this.

Ra large kettle with plenty of room in it,
Pour in of water one quart and no more;
On a slow fire set, while you're stewing it,
Into it these rare ingredients pour:
One pint of politics, strong, highly flavored,
Bottled by Parmeter, Calvin & Co.;
Three or four kodaks, they're always much favored
At rows and at clinics and many a show;
One box of poetry (see that it's very new),
Chopped fine and sprinkled with unsparing hand,
Six dozen jokes, each one humorous, short and true,
Filled with a wit that not one can withstand.
Let each fraternity its special flavor add,
Giving it zest and variety too;
Then at last for a final rich savor, add
One pinch of literature, one will quite do.
So after mixing and stirring and tasting,
And being quite careful to skim off the scum,
You will find, if your work has been without hasting,
A PULSE most sublime is the residuum.

Anatomy in Rhyme

AWARDED THIRD PRIZE.

WHEN the Anatomy of the Anatomist was anatomized t'was found
That the Ulna Meta carpal near the Radialis ground;
That old Ole cranon bordered on the Humerus alone,
So they said it was no wonder, that it was a funny bone.
The Clavicle and Scapula the Humerus did support,
The Sternum from between the Ribs was kind of holding fort
The Frontal and Occipital were reaching far and wide,
And the Parietal and Temporal had joined them in the side.
The Petrous point went inward and contained the inner Ear,
The Orbits they looked outward to take in things far and near,
The Upper and the Lower Jaw they helped to make the Face;
The Sphenoid and the Ethmoid too, they both had found a place.
The Turbinated, Nasal and the Palate came in time,
And the Lachrymal and Malar were included in the rhyme.
The Hyoid kind of ruled the Tongue, and said, now I suppose
The Vomer was intended for to divide the Nose.
And the Processes and Tubercles were scattered here and there,
And the Fossæ made depressions for to catch you unaware.
And then the Spinal Column was full of Vertebræ,
And the Sacrum helped to form behind the Pelvic Cavity.
The Coccyx helped a little on the Posterior wall;
But the Os Inominata was at the bottom of it all.
The Femur and the Tibia were trying to make ends meet,
And then they found the Fibula pointing towards the Feet;
The Tibia that did the shinning and had stood most of the brunt,
Thought it funny the Patella had kept so near the front.
The little Metatarsal bones they keep so near the land,
The reason why they give is, because they understand.

For the Pulse

A POEM BY OSCAR, WILDE MARY PLAYED THE FLUTE.

IT was utter, quite too utter-deep to see;
Rich an' rosy-rare, a medder an' a lea;
An' the colors they was applicated free—
For the dingle-burrs was mingled,
An' the tunes was all attingled,
For the style kerslap it went permisc'usly.

Oh, the ardor interlarded in the lines!
Superlunar, incandescent nix it shines!
While the baying howls about her the portals whines—
An' such swell accumulations,
Triple X brand figurations,
An' a Duke an' Dukess on the remains dines.

Yes, the wine, an' wit, an' women went quite how;
An' the spreezy spray dashed clear up o'er the bow;
For the Jersey maiden milked the Jersey cow;
Still the good ol' ship o' state
With them drinks was quite elate,
An' I'm thinkin' you're a thinkin' of she now.

“Old Tom”

Grim Death with his sickle mows them down,
For they are the wages of sin,
And the grave looks on with an ominous frown,
As Old Tom gently gathers them in.

Old Death selects flowers, leaves nothing but weeds,
Shining marks he desires to win;
Either flowers or marks suffice for the needs
Of Old Tom and he gathers them in.

Some of their souls soar far, far away,
They go to join those of their kin,
But the material stuff that was destined for clay,
Why, Old Tom he gathers it in.

On the hooks in the box, in silent repose,
Away from the world's strife and din,
They silently swing from their ankylosed toes,
For Old Tom has gathered them in.

The “material” is dank and oozy with dew,
Yet each on his face bears a grin
Of content, as if he felt honored and knew
That Old Tom had gathered him in.

Some day we must all be rounded up
By our friend, The Wages of Sin,
And when we've drunk of his fatal cup,
May Old Tom kindly gather us in.

For Old Tom is so gentle and kindly and true,
And to all such a good friend has been,
That like the “material” I'd grin if I knew
That Old Tom was to gather me in.

The New Casabianca

A hen-medic stood on icy skates,
But then she could not go;
She was afraid to attempt the fate,
Because she wobbled so.

She called aloud, "Say! Wagner, say!!
Do come; help me along;"
But Wagner went the other way,
Because his feet went wrong.

Then came a crash like thunder sound,
The "hen," Oh! where was she?
Ask of the giddy Wagner 'round,
Who viewed her hosiery.

My Beating Heart

'Twas not a maiden's lovely eyes,
'Twas not her winning smile so sweet;
Nor yet her soft, melodious voice—
These did not cause my heart to beat.

The time was half-past three one afternoon,
The arena, Dr. Senn's clinic, the place;
My heart beat, well — because, you see,
I could not diagnose the case.

“The Mills of the “Docs” grind Slowly,
And they grind exceeding small.”

Bone, and boneing, and bone;
Think, and thinking, and think;
Growl, despairing, and groan;
Swear, and yawning, and blink.

Up in the morning at 5;
Grind all the forenoon like sin;
Wonders why he is alive;
“Why don’t earth cave, let me in?”

Blinkety-blinkety Phys. !
Brickety-brackety Chem.!!
Hangety-hing the whole biz !!!
Blimety-blamety-blem !!!!

But at last the grinding grind is done,
All too soon the skinny sheepskin’s won,
“Chronic cases” raise a shouting shout,
For the M. D. doctor is turned out.

N days of old

When Seniors were bold
And Middlers held their sway,
A Professor bold
With specs of gold
Sang merrily this lay:
"I hold the—— chair
"Superintendent too, I swear,
"In Rush so gay,
"That all do say,
"That none with me compare.
"So what care I,
"Though students sigh,
"I'll have my way or die."

So this brave Knight,
With whiskers white,
Went boldly to the fray.
"Tell me your name;"
"Next man the same,"
So plainly did he say—
"Meet me to-night at seven,
I'll stop this passing up, by heaven!"
Said he, retreating to the door,
Mid hisses, groans and roar
"What care I
Though students sigh,
I'll live for Rush or die!!"

To Westerschulte

BOYIBUS kissibus
Sweet girliorum;
Girlibus likibus,
Wanti someorum.

Inibus lapibus
Sit girliorum;
Thenibus boyibus
Kissi someorum.

Papibus seeibus
Slap girliorum;
Kickibus boyibus
Outi doororum.

Thenibus boyibus
Limp homeorum;
Girlibus cryibus,
Kissi nomoreum.

A girl in white is a pretty sight,
And so is a bottle of Sec,
A dish of ice cream with your midsummer dream,
Or clams from the Little Neck.

A poem is good if the end comes soon,
And of moral is not bereft;
And get right advice, if you get it at all,
But if you can't get the right, don't get left.

I remember. I remember the dear old sunny days
 When my fancy wandered downward long a misty magic maze;
 Clouds like cotton; fleecy shadows only made the azure skies
 Soft and mellow, deep and perfect; to my young admiring eyes.
 How the babbling brooklets babbled, how the roses hedged my way
 Just a few thorns to remind me that the florist I must pay.
 All the birdies tuned their tunelets all the lowing kine lowed low;
 All the April showers showered; and the snow, Beautiful Snow,*
 All my dreams were dreams of glory, all my thoughts were thunk in joy;
 I was not a maiden lassie, I was but a boyish boy -
 Now grim Care has scarred my forehead, bowed my stately athlete form.
 Inky swamps are my green pastures, snow is now a sleety storm
 For while leaning my big aching head upon my trembling hand
 Comes a voice, screech, bellow, yell, Oh piercing clear to where I stand!
 Filious landlady oris cries, MY maw she wants to know
 When yer goin' to pay the room rent, if yer dont yer'll halt to go
 Esculapian Shades befriend me! Pitying friend lend me your ear;
 Also X for I am busted, bankrupt, busted do you hear?

*My accent must have kyphosis, for at middle point 'tis bent;
 Could not help it, gentle reader, for my ac(center) is lent.
 Tho' the words are weak and wobbly, tho' the sentiment is sad,
 Still the pictures, done by "Reddy," are not very, very bad.

Preceptors

PRECEPTORS, they are whiskered things
Which, long before the flood,
Attended Rush, wore angel-wings,
Invariably stood
The first or second in the class,
Gave Valedictories, too;
Such things as theaters they would pass,
They'd never smoke or chew.

They all tell tales of such a kind;
But some day when you see
Your old preceptor's chum, you'll find
Their statements don't agree.
He'll tell how they flunked Prexy's chair,
And of their scrapes and sprees —
Ah, they had sowed their oats, that pair,
And near lost their degrees.

So you can wink the other eye
And call your Doctor down,
And ask him how much "paint" to buy
To "do" this wicked town.

* * * * *

And when certificates you file,
You'll find you've not been fooled,
For your preceptor's flattering style
Will settle Mr. Gould.

Benjamin Rush

"Patriot and Physician" he is named.
How well those titles seem to link! No clash
Is felt to speak of one who thus is famed.
We picture him a man of thought—no rash,
Impetuous adventurer; but one
Who long had studied life, and in whose breast
The love of liberty was strong. A son
Of Freedom — called to lead the rest.

The Medic's Hoodoo

I. — D. J.

D. J. to Rush College came,
Without his pa's advice;
Of course he saw Chicago,
For his father had the price;
But when examination came,
He didn't know a thing.
The Professor he took him by the arm,
And in his ear did sing:
"Do, do, my D. J. do, do;
It's clear that you're a hoodoo.
You've fooled away your eight long months,
And now I'll tell you what you do.
Do, do, my D. J. do, do.
Come back again next year,
And if you're pa still has the price,
You'll surely find us here."

II. — Middler

A Middler with a pony sat
And copied every line;
Of course he thought it pretty smooth
To have it down so fine;
But when he got his paper back,
He didn't beam with pride;
For written in plain English there,
This note he found inside:
"Do, do, my Middler, do, do,
You see we're on to you, do;
You thought yourself right in it,
But your pony was a hoodoo, you do;
Do, do, my Middler, do, do;
You see you're not the hero,
So just to play this on the square,
We'll mark you now a zero."

III. — Senior

A Senior let his whiskers grow,
And said just one more time
And I will be a brilliant star,
Placed in this world to shine;
But when the term was nearly done,
He got a note one day,
'Twas signed by the Professor,
And this to him did say:
"Do, do, my Senior, do, do,
Your whiskers are a hoodoo;
You better take and air your face,
It might help your gray matter to do;
Do, do, my Senior, do, do;
Once more is the proper caper,
And then you're sure to finish, if
You write the proper paper."

IV. — Finale

You Medics are a queer old crew,
You have such funny ways;
The Seniors hate the Middlers,
And the Middlers the D. J.'s;
But it won't make much difference
When it comes to cure a case,
Whether you have whiskers
Or just a clean smooth face: but,
"Do, do, my Medics, do, do,
The world is far from true do;
So don't go out and starve to death,
But do others or they'll you do;
Do, do, my Medics, do,
Say nothing but saw wood,
And when you "do" a patient,
Don't forget to do him good."

Just Like Him

And now the wily Doctor,
Instead of taking his ease,
Is sitting up both night and day,
To invent some new disease.

Hard Luck

A Middler had a little book,
Its leaves were white as snow,
He wrote his answers in it,
So he'd be sure and know;
He took the book to school with him,
To help in the exam.,
But a spotter stood behind him
And it wasn't worth a d——!

Death's Visit

Death came to me the other night,
And knelt upon my bed;
His icy breath was on my cheek,
His eyes fixed on my head.

A stethoscope from space he drew,
And placed upon my chest,
Various adventitious sounds he heard,
Which added to his zest.

Broncho-vesicular sounds were there,
In spots, râles, high pitched, moist.
My pulse he felt, and then my head,
Indeed he seemed rejoiced.

Calmly I lay, nor felt afraid
What Death would diagnose,
For while it makes me shudder now,
I then was comatose.

"I will claim you soon," said he,
"Nor have I long to wait,
"For having chronic pneumonia,
"Death will be your fate."

"Your prognosis, Death," I said,
"Would make the bravest tremble;
"But I have reason, sir, to doubt,
"The truth of your ensemble.

"Oh no! bold Reaper, you have said
"Some words for which you'll blush;
"Perhaps you do not know, kind sir,
"That I'm from GRAND OLD RUSH."

I HAD a patient t'other day,
I mean the patient's wife,
She said he acted crazy way,
And mumbled 'bout his life.

He talked so funny, so she said,
And wanted things so queer,
That she was having quite a dread
Which most became a fear,

That her dear man was quite unwell,
And from the cares of life,
Together with some other things,
Was having "change of life."

Phonation.

The pharynx being lifted up,
The larynx with a slam
Will jerk the note
Out of your throat
With the aid of the diaphragm.

College Alphabet

I'm asked to write an Alphabet, to put down on paper
 Some jokes, some quips, some gags, some rot in poetry to "kape her"
 From growing dull or heavy, for the student's mind is wearied,
 And with grinding in a beaten path, his convolutions serried
 Have convoluted for so long, his ideas are all buried.*

But A must stand for animal — each one of us is one,
 And some are animaler than the other one has done.

Is the Beautiful Beyond — the Happy
 Hunting ground,
 Where Horses, Homes, Happiness and great fat fees are found.

Stands for "Crawl," which some must do before the Facultee,
 When looking for a "stand in," or a rake off if a "V."

*So are mine.

Stands, collective or alone, for expressions of much force,
Used just before and after the exams.
of the whole course.

Starts the name of Error, the microbe which infests
Your first few years of practice, though you do your level best.

Stands for Funny Fellow, the PULSE is full of him;
But in my own opinion, I'm in the swift-est swim.

Is for Gall, Get there and Grind, the elements united,
With which, well used, your fondest hopes will never once be blighted.

Surely stands for Ha! Ha! a wild, demoniac yell,
Tossed on the breeze by class-mates,
when you recite unwell.

Is the fellow, present now, who will go home some day,
To strut about his native town, with cane and plug hat gay.

Is for Junior, dear "D. J.!" the memories sweetly cling,
Of passings up from the front row, and being spanked en swing.

Means Karyokinesis, common fate of all,
To be, to am, to was, our cells grow up,
divide and fall.

The Laboratory fills the next, the finest in the west,
Of buildings, teachers, students, stiffs,
old Rush will have the best.

Always stands for Medicine, a region much explored,
And it's contrary to ethics for you new facts to hoard.

Means the ninety and nine, who get passed as of old,
And one is out on the hills away, for the Profs. have plucked him cold.

Is the orphan you will meet full oft in coming years,
Cheer up the broken hearted, in sad eyes dry the tears.

Stands for Pluck, and "Hush! Hush!
Hush!" this is our bogie man,
Be careful, you incredulous, they'll catch you if they can.

While Q, the dearest of them all,
for Queen of Hearts must stand,
Each Medic has the sweetest one in all our pleasant land.

Stands for but one word with us—
The glorious name of Rush;
Onward, upward, broader, deeper, her achievements ever push.

Is for "Short," a wee microbe, but numerous as blazes,
Infects your purse and then your dad raises Cain much more than praises.

Is the starter out for Tough, the proper name of some,
But now the Com. on Ways and Means weed out those who are bum.

Shows the union of the parts, that vast articulation
Of Rush's sons, whose brains and hearts join in one great congregation.

Then V and W, and X and Y and Z remain;
But surely, gentle reader, with the writer you will shout,
How long, O tiresome alphabet! how long will you hold out?
For Pegasus now is knee-sprung, his eyes sunk in their sockets;
His spirits, soaring once so high, now fall like sticks from rockets.
But this is plain, I'm sure, my dear, so
I need not explain.

February 14, '95

SAINTE VALENTINE

Has set apart this day,
That maids as well as men may speak
The words they want to say;
And so I choose this proper time,
And send this billet-doux,
That you may have a chance to dream
How much I think of you.

I love to see y<sup>o</sup>ur manly form
Come hurrying home from college;
I love to think how full your head
Will some day be of knowledge;
I love to hear, if truth be told,
Your merry sleigh-bells jingle;
But most I love to think of when
The world will read your shingle.

Then I'll come to you,
And be your very own;
I'll keep your silver door-plate bright
And tend your telephone.
For you I'll learn to cook all things,
From lemon-ice to mush;
May heaven hasten on the day
You'll graduate from Rush.

The Meerschaum Club

In Executive Session

"To soothe the dreamer's every care,
To glow and burn and fill the air
With thy curling perfume rare;
As thou charmest gloom away,
With the dreamer rest for aye,
Friend of youth and manhood ripe,
All hail to thee, thou meerschaum pipe!"

To the Air of "Willow, Tit=Willow"

ON the perch in the college a little D. J.
Sat crying and weeping and crying,
And I said, "Little D. J., Oh, why do you sit
A crying and weeping and crying?
Is it exams. by Dodson," I soothingly cried,
"Or have you at ponying lately been spied?"
With a shake of his wee little head he replied,
"It's Lyman, it's Lyman, it's Lyman."

"He caught us, poor D. J.'s, a raising a fight,
This man Lyman, this Lyman, this Lyman,
And he told me to call at his office to-night,
This Lyman, this Lyman, this Lyman.
Oh, what shall I do?" he cried in despair,
And wildly he clutched at his curly black hair;
But said I with a wink and right knowing air,
"It's a bluff of this Lyman, this Lyman."

If I Were You

IF you were I, if I were you,
If each were other of the two,
If, that's to say if "if" came true,
What good we both would surely do!

I'd put to rout your every wrong,
Though every is a mighty throng.
While you, I s'pose, would do likewise.
And all my errors minimize.

'Tis thus we think, 'tis thus we say,
'Tis thus we preach and prate and pray,
Whene'er we see another slip
On anatomy, or on medicine trip;
And yet I think if "if" came true,
Things would go as now they do,
If each were other of the two,
If you were I, if I were you.

A Mystery

There's something that seems very strange,
It is a mystery to me,
Why every student, Sunday nights,
Is studying anatomy.
If on Monday morning you ask him
A question in chemistry,
You will surely receive the answer:
"I'm not prepar'd, you see,
Last night I was very busy
Studying my anatomy."

If you ask that very fellow,
To be truthful and tell you straight,
What happened to him last evening,
That caused him to be out so late;
At first he will not answer you,
But will stammer and hesitate,
And then, in a very poor way,
Will lay the blame on his room-mate;
But his fellow-roomer will tell you,
"They both left their room before eight."

Now we, who are not studying
Anatomy, can only surmise
What becomes of these young doctors
Between eight at night and sunrise.
It is not to be wondered at,
We assure you, it's no surprise,
That all are "excused" on Monday;
Quiz-masters, no doubt, realize,
In this case like many others,
It is folly to be too wise.

But where those fellows do study
On Sunday eves, I cannot see,
Unless they devote their evenings
To practical anatomy.
If this is the fact, and I think
That undoubtedly it must be,
Then they are in some lamp-lighted
Parlor, holding upon their knee,
Not "Gray's," not "Holden's," nor "Quain's,"
But their best girl's anatomy.

“Rush” and “The Rush”

UP from the boarding-house at break of day,
Six hundred students wended their way;
O'er to the college in crowds they went,
Each on his own particular work intent.

Some to the “Lab.” do bend their steps;
While to the “Quiz” to save their reps.,
The various sections were quizzed by the master,
Though certain of the class generally query the asker.

The latter queer the Prof. as if they knew
The lesson assign'd the whole way through;
When, to tell the truth, they'd been on a skate
The night before, and to save their fate

And their questionable grades from a horrible zero,
They talk to the Prof. as only a hero,
A man full of wind, or one full of gall,
By daring their many mistakes to recall,

After the master had ordered him down,
With many a look and many a frown;
But still he keeps on, vainly trying to tell
Of something you know he knows nothing very well.

Still others to the lectures climb the stairs,
And for the “Exam.” to allay their fears,
Take copious notes of all 'tis said,
Which in the text books can plainly be read.

While most to the lessons do give their attention,
A few do give their minds to invention
Of something for pleasure, for profit or fun;
Thus in various ways their minds do run.

But after the “Lab.,” the “Quiz,” or the Lecture,
Comes that of which only the mind can conjecture,
When two grades meet and one is a bar
To the passage of the other; from near and far

Can be heard, “Down the D. J.!” “Pass him along!”
“Out with the Middlers!” and to this song
Men are dragged away, pulled away, jumped,
But all in good humor, and thoroughly thumped.

Seats are broken and crushed as if they were glass,
While the men are in that struggling mass,
Striving their principles to maintain,
And always one side striving in vain.

Crash go windows, should they happen near by;
“A. ‘D. J.’ fell down stairs!” some one will cry;
And fierce the “D. J.’s” will jam and push,
To maintain their footing in “The Rush.”

But hark! some one whispered a wonderful “nomen ;”
'Twas Lyman, Dodson or Etheridge coming.
A scattering, a scramble, a run for a seat,
And any one that perchance you should meet,

Is either an angel or a divinity “stude,”
Who'd be perfectly shocked at half so rude
A thing as a “Medical Rush,” at “Rush Medical.”
“How am I?” “Thank you, I'm very well.”

Life at Rush

I. As "Freshmen" first we came to Rush,
Our heads were swelled, our pockets flush;
But when we're there a year or more,
We lose conceit and dimes galore.

II. We learn quite soon we have to work,
And never ought our duty shirk,
For if we do, we know full well
Exam. or Quiz will surely tell.

III. The D. J. green, with open mouth,
And eyes focused to spear,
Attends the minor clinics all
To gaze and peek and peer.

IV. And if perchance he gets a "sit,"
Or towels he may hold,
Then all important he becomes
As Vanderbilt or Gould.

V. The Sophomores, a jovial class,
Are now well organized;
So when they meet a D. J. mob,
The latter are capsized.

VI. The Seniors, grave in port and mien,
Have learned "to look wise;"
Exemplary now they have become,
They foolish things despise.

VII. Hurrah for Rush, the college so grand,
Whose fame extends throughout the land;
To her teachers all we're loyal and true,
For her we'll speak all our lives through.

VIII. For she's our Alma Mater dear,
Her precepts all we do revere;
Her teachers all have sages been Since first her history did begin.

NEMO.

The Doctor's Life

The doctor has a busy life,
If he would gain some fame;
From morn till eve he toils each day
To try to earn a name.

Quite often, too, he runs great risk
When pestilence stalks around,
And Death meets him on every side;
But at his post he's found,

For Duty is his watchword e'er,
He must its calls obey,
And hasten to each suffering one
His anguish to allay.

Sublime and great his mission:
The relief of human woes.
If always he his duty does,
He's blessed where'er he goes.

His information should be broad,
His knowledge most profound;
His culture should be very high,
His tactics shrewd and sound.

A love for his profession should Prevail within his mind;
For if he lack this quality
He's sure to lag behind.

And in the race for prominence
He'll be far in the rear,
While he whose soul is in his work
Will at the goal be near.

Reminiscences from a D. J.'s Career.

SCHON drei monat he's been freshman
Alle while so schwere studiert,
Yeden Suntag, gets a jag on Every quiz-room schemer probiert.
"Lieber vater, schick me money Verm du willst, one hundred more,"
"Ach, mein Gott !!! Fier hundred dollar?
Nie gehert like dass before."
In der class he says, "Ich weis nicht," Mit ein gentle sheep-like look.
"Alle recht," der Prof. makes autwort,
Schreibt ein goose egg in his book.
Nimt sein paper von Herr Dodson,
Wird ihn helfen if he can,
Auf sein waugen—consternation,
"Let him take some other man."
"Look not over," sagt der Kaufman,
"Auf die bletter of your freund,
If its wrong du hast verloren,
Dumme asel—see the point?"
"Yeder must on foot hintreten
Von examination sälle,
Hast dem pony eingeritten,
He's confiscated, dass ist all."
Aber still, to be a D. J.,
Dass thut mann sein kopf inflate,
Es kann sein ein wise decision,
Wenn Ich bleib mit ninety-eight.

An Appeal for Co-Education.

The old "Hen Meds.," a forlorn crew,
With faces long and prospects blue,
In vain have tried the boys to dupe,
Till now their lips begin to droop.
In vain they drill o'er bones and drugs,
In place of sewing home-made rugs;
In vain they hoard up treasures and pelf,
Despite all this they're left on the shelf.
Fair, beauteous forms they once possessed,
But as these fade they're not caressed.
Why not then have co-education,
Since early marriage is their salvation?

My Crown

O-NIGHT, 'mongst scattered books and close-lined leaves
Torn lecture notes, thumbed Lymans galore,
A pair of foils, and photographs, and sheaves,
Of cricket bats, and gloves besmirched with gore,
I hold my sway, and mightily I reign;
Though men have called me servile, drudge and slave,
Bowing to learning, bound by wisdom's chain
To sheep-skinned potentates, my lieges grave.

The erstwhile powers of day now bend to me;
My Gray is blythe fancy, sweet, inert;
My empire is beside a fairy sea
By gnomes and sprites and eldritch vassals kept.
The past is all my own, the future years
Beneath my laws lose all their mystery;
The hills are made of hearts, the deep of fears;
Its bounds are now and all eternity.

Can Rome's patrician with the laurel twined;
Or Papal seer, with mitre richly wrought,
Or iron band, to Lombard power kind,
E'er buy the wealth my covenant has bought ?
Devoid of care and cleansed of all life's shine,
A balm to all vicissitude and pain,
It stealeth through the midnight like the chime
That wakes our merry spring-tide to refrain.

Above my head, as creeps this dusky hour,
My crown sways as in runic rythm wrapt,
Like down of buds, or essence of a flower,
From wind to wind in endless order lapped.
The world has faded while this subtle thrall
Winds upward 'neath the gursile flame too ripe;
'Tis thus my crown hath borne itself, it's all
From out the crimson centre of my pipe.

Presentation of Profs. DeLaskie Miller's and Ephraim Ingals' Portraits to College, in behalf of the Class of '94 on class day

E. H. OCHSNER.

TO-DAY is a happy and memorial day for our class. Class day in most universities and colleges is the day of days during the commencement season, and we too are trying to make it interesting and enjoyable to all who may attend. To-day will be memorable principally because we are about to establish a precedent which we hope will often be followed in the future, which will undoubtedly give pleasure to many and add interest and enthusiasm to the class day exercises.

In private as well as public life we are only too prone to cringe and crawl at the feet of those who are in power, even though they be entirely unworthy of our homage, and often only too slow in paying tribute to the truly worthy until it is too late. We of the Class of '94 have never bowed our heads or bent our knees to any one, no matter how influential, unless he was fully deserving of our highest regards, and yet as a class we are among the first to honor as best we can some of those who are especially worthy of our admiration and esteem.

Through the kindness of two of our professors it has been made possible for our class to present to the college portraits of two of the most noted and highly esteemed members of our Faculty. We have often regretted during our course that we could not see these men more frequently, receive from their own lips more of their vast store of knowledge, and yet we are glad to know that it is possible for them to spend the afternoon and evening of their most useful lives in well deserved leisure and repose.

It is our wish that these portraits may ever remain in these halls, that future students sitting on these benches may often look up at their kindly faces, and by so doing be aroused to think nobly and act bravely. Nature is a wonderful artist, and each kind and good deed done has helped to mould the lines which express firmness of purpose, serenity of mind and nobility of heart.

It is my great privilege to present to the Faculty and Trustees of Rush Medical College, in behalf of the Class of '94, these beautiful portraits of Professors DE LASKIE MILLER and EPHRAIM INGALS.

Prof. HENRY M. LYMAN accepted the portrait of Prof. INGALS on behalf of the Faculty, and Prof. JOHN B. HAMILTON accepted that of Prof. MILLER.

Prof. LYMAN said:

Mr. President, Gentlemen of the Trustees, Faculty and Students of Rush Medical College:

In the palmy days of ancient Greece, when Pericles and Phidias, and Æschylus and Sophocles, and Socrates and Plato were making Athens glorious with everything that renders a city great and magnificent, if some vaporizing young blade in a fit of enthusiasm was extolling the present at the expense of the past, it was usual for the wise old men to wag their heads and to say, "Yes, but there were great men before Agamemnon."

So when you feel impressed with the present dignity of your alma mater, and grow warm with zeal as you behold Professor SENN, or Professor HAMILTON, or Professor ETHERIDGE wading through seas of blood to glory and fame, remember that "there were great men before Agamemnon."

We are especially favored on this occasion by the fact that we have with us two honored representatives of that former generation, and that you can for yourselves trace the accuracy of the likeness in their counterfeit presentments, the portraits now presented to the college. It is because these men have lived and labored, it is because they devoted their lives to the work of medical teaching, that Rush Medical College is to-day what she is — one of the greatest medical colleges in the United States of America. "There were great men before Agamemnon."

From this pleasing incident, moreover, I gather comfort for the future. Sometimes I say to myself, "What will we do when President HOLMES goes the way of all flesh, and we have his faithful supervision no more? What will become of the college when Dr. HYDE and Dr. BEVAN and the rest of us have to lay down the scalpel and the stethoscope?" But an instant of reflection reassures me, and I believe that as there were great men before Agamemnon, so there will be great men after him. Some one will be always found ready to lift up the banner of progress and to bear it triumphantly onward forever. Yes, there were great men before Agamemnon, and after him there will be great men still so long as time shall endure.

Dr. HAMILTON said:

We accept from the original himself, at your hands, this faithful representation of an ideal teacher, an accomplished obstetrician, a scholar, a sagacious counselor and a patriotic citizen. Prof. DE LASKIE MILLER has been identified with Rush Medical College almost from its beginning, and although still vigorous in mind and body, he has been actively associated with every movement which step by step has placed this college in the advance rank of American educational institutions. His early career as a medical journalist, and his Presidency of the Section on Obstetrics of the International Medical Congress at Washington, extended a knowledge of his worth and ability beyond the confines of his city to other lands; for at the close of that now historic Congress, he had acquired friends and admirers almost to the ends of the earth. I need scarcely speak in his presence, of his long and faithful service as a professor in this college; hundreds of Alumni have heard his voice, and, thanks to the instruction those Alumni received, thousands of American citizens that otherwise might have blighted as mere experimental suggestions, were born to the glory of God and the increase of the population of the Republic. We need not enlarge on this topic; we need only say that in the presentation of this picture, the generous donor has added another jewel to the Rush Medical College collection. We read in northern mythology of the Walhalla, that the building itself, whose dome was so high that its summit could scarcely be seen, was as marvelous as the heroes whose virtues it was built to commemorate; that its location was in the midst of the grove "Mansur," where all the trees bore leaves of gold. In time this will become our Walhalla, although we lay no stress on architectural display as did those who designed that famous structure. In years to come, Alumni visiting Rush Memorial Hall of the future may truthfully say of this picture, as of the "animated bust" and "storied urn" of song:

"Bright Fancy, hovering o'er,
Scatters from her pictured urn
Thoughts that breathe and words that burn."

Class History '94

DELIVERED ON CLASS DAY, MAY 21ST.

Mr. President, Fellow Class-mates, Professors, Ladies and Gentlemen:

College life, with its ever-changing cycle of classes, its myriads of successes and failures, its triumphs and disappointments, its pleasures and drudgery, has forced three classes from Rush's threshold since we became her children, and but a few days remain until the class of '94 will be launched upon life's battle-field to join our alma mater's working children of the world. A few reminiscences of the past, a few facts to be ever remembered, a few words of sadness to record the lives of those who have passed on before, a few items jotted from each mile-stone of the short medical highway which we have traveled, a few pages to be filed away among the archives of Rush Medical College literature, and the historian of the class of '94 will have fulfilled his mission.

As medical students for decades had read in the office of a "regular" physician for a year previous to reveling in the medical atmosphere which engulfs a medical college, so we like our predecessors delved deeply into anatomy, physiology, chemistry and materia medica for the required twelve months. But as we were then widely separated, and as many of us had years before developed the idea of becoming physicians, and had studied in literary colleges preparatory to our medical education, the medical life of these students may be said to date far beyond the four years required for graduation, so we will begin the history proper with the gathering of the class three years ago.

In the autumn of 1891 we shook the parental dust from our feet, grasped the hands of our relatives and friends in a last good-by, boarded the train, and soon reached the city where all was new, the only familiar object being the sun, and he in all his wisdom and brightness deceived us by habitually setting in the north. We demonstrated our enthusiasm by calling the college clerk up at midnight to receive our fees. We called at the Cook County Hospital for lodgings, thinking it was a hotel, but the watchman kindly informed us that they were all sick abed and we could not be accommodated. The following day we secured a room, and after asking every senior if he had a roommate, we accidentally ran across a partner in misery and then secured a roommate. The college clerk secured our money, we secured our seat (which a senior usurped the following day). We secured a meal ticket at a restaurant, we secured a note book as large as a family Bible, and thus began the life of a medical student in earnest.

We were all present to hear the opening address. We came early, and after we had listened to the piercing yells and war-whoops of the seniors for a short time, we expected to see the college course opened with a scalpel in true medical style, and feared that a junior might be selected as a sacrifice. Finally the Faculty marched in and all the noise soon died away, and we listened with wonder to the sound advice delivered in polysyllabic words by the lecturer. That night we returned to our room, feeling that the medical atmosphere was very noisy, and that reveling in those long words would be a duty rather than a pleasure. We spent half of the night looking through our new dictionary for one of those words, but failed to find it. The next morning we arrived at the college early, and with our ticket in our hand we marched directly past the janitor without showing him our ticket or giving him a tip, which we learned afterward was a very difficult accomplishment. It was about this period of our medical course that we assumed the title of D. J., which tradition tells us signifies sacrilegiously that we were juniors. Before the end of our first week came we were surprised to learn that we were expected to know so much about the four principal branches, and that our previous year's reading amounted to so little.

From the very first lecture we became very much in love with our professors, and each man conceived the idea to work a "pull" if an opportunity offered, the result being that each "pull" had, at least, a score of faithful workers. This admiration for our professors was the cause of one of them resigning his position in our faculty at the early part of our course. We would not now find fault or reprove our class-mates for things done when we were not versed in the code; but we do think many of those expressions of admiration were too forcible, and the lecturer, of course, failed in health and was compelled to give up the work. These expressions of admiration came down to him in showers of notes, and it occasionally took him all the following night to read them, thus impairing his health so he could not withstand the hearty reception with which the students were wont to greet him as he entered the lecture room. We did little else to distinguish ourselves during the first year. Of course we formed the acquaintance of LAMB and McLAIN; asked a druggist for Virginia Prunes in connection with our study of materia medica; dissected with a broadax, worked in the dispensary, exploded half the chemicals in the laboratory, and in fact covered ourselves with glory and nitric acid. Individually some members of the class need more than passing comment for the work which they did in bringing the class into prominence. "Tensor Tarsi" established the fact that a muscle was much longer than was formerly supposed. "Here Sah" answered to his name so promptly that he became a shining light, even if he did at first try to make us believe that he was a senior. "Frog-eater" distinguished himself over on Milwaukee avenue. The professors finally learned to pronounce WARNSHUI's name, WILBUR moved because the landlady refused to call him doctor, and ARTIE borrowed two dollars of a senior. The exceeding brilliancy of these and a few other members of our class made it necessary for the professors who lectured exclusively to us to wear smoked glasses.

The first meeting of our class was a very sad one indeed, for we had scarcely become familiar with the halls and rooms of the college until it was announced that one of our number had passed to his heavenly reward, and we were called together to draft resolutions in remembrance of HENRY FIELD. The class had no other meetings during the first year and no organization of the class was deemed necessary. Finally, the examinations came and we were reminded that we had reached the first mile-stone on the road of medical science, and we were now to be examined to determine how much we had gleaned by the roadside.

During our first vacation we were startled to hear the sad news that one of our beloved professors had closed his lips forever, that another brilliant star in the firmament of Rush had fallen, and that upon our return to college we would miss the thoughtful, careful lectures of Prof. KNOX. Very soon after the opening of our second term we learned that not only a professor but one of our own number was missing and had answered the summons of the Maker of Peace. We learned that JAMES GAGNON had succumbed to typhoid fever, and the class was again called together in remembrance of one of her members.

The class of '94 now looked forward to prosperity and advancement, and concluded that in order to work in harmony a class organization must be effected, so C. D. CENTER was elected president; F. E. SHAYKETT, vice-president; and H. F. THOMPSON, secretary. The meetings of the class during this year were few and not important, as very little business came before the class, and the orators of the class did not develop until the last year. In the class room we seemed to outclass our predecessors who had traveled the road before and should have discovered what we so easily demonstrated. A new tumor which was called a "neurolgia" was found by one of our class; we saw a glass eye which could see; we conducted a skin clinic in the dispensary; we worked all the available "pulls;" we fainted in the maternity; we bribed the janitor and secured a good cadaver; we passed the juniors up; in fact, we had a fine time. Early in this year we were gratified to hear that among our sedate, hard-working class were accomplished dancers, and that in conjunction with other medical colleges in the city we were to have a ball, where all cares and trials would be banished by pleasure, and where the image of the glaring eyes and ghastly grin of a cadaver would be replaced by feminine beauties enshrouded in loveliness and fashion. We waited patiently until we heard the first strains of the orchestra and the delicate patter of the dancers' feet before we believed the medical students could have so nice a ball as was predicted. The ball was a success, and when the prizes were awarded we noticed the same ardent spirit manifested by our class-mates which had characterized their work in arranging for the ball. The superiority of the class had been noticed on several occasions, but being very modest we never appeared in public until at the commencement exercises of the class of '93, when one of our members, Mr. O. B. BOCK, received the Daniel Brainard gold medal for the best dissection.

This class being enthusiastic over literary work, not only furnished two editors of The Corpuscle, one member of the editing board of the Lake Forest College annual in 1892, but it was this class which conceived the idea and began the work of publishing an annual for Rush. Our annual was dropped for lack of time and support from the other classes, but the work was not abandoned, for the succeeding class began the work in time and in earnest, and having the support of the whole school, produced a book of which every man connected with Rush feels proud. The following class has also taken up the work of editing a similar book next year, so that in succeeding years we may expect to have a publication which will represent Rush in all of her varied phases. The annual like The Corpuscle was the first publication of its kind produced in America by medical students.

The end of the second year soon came, and it was here that so many of our fellow students concluded that it was a long narrow road that led to a Rush diploma, and that it did not take so much "pluck" to secure a diploma in an adjoining city, so a special train was secured for the land of moonshiners and fast horses. We also lost several members at the end of the year who feared that the medical profession with a large practice would be too trying on their constitutions, and that the farm promised a more quiet, luxuriant life.

The next year promised more for our class than the previous one, for this was the year of the great Exposition. Many of our class secured positions as guides and guards at the Fair, and besides sleeping in water soaked bunks, wrapped in worse soaked blankets, they kept their friends from the rural districts off the grass, from killing the foreigners on the Midway, and from being buncoed out of their return tickets. During this vacation several of the boys sold Bibles to the people of Iowa and Nebraska, one became a Pinkerton detective and came very near arresting a real burglar, a few got married, while others only rested and waited for the last term.

The beginning of the senior year was ominous for the class of '94. The new building was soon to be completed and the best facilities for instruction were to be used, the recitation system in divided classes was new, and the class soon saw the superiority of this plan over all others. New special courses were added, and improved methods were added to nearly every practical course; plenty of room was now secured for all the different classes. The only thing lacking was time, and the Faculty then made the spring term compulsory, thus making one continuous term of study eight months in length.

The seniors concluded to have an election after the term had fairly opened and all the members had returned from their vacation. In about ten days of adjourned meetings, postponements and lobbyings all the offices were filled. The wire workers got together, and after the chief mogul and lesser lights had made a slate and whipped the rabble into line, it looked like folly to hold an election, but the mogul and his clan did not want to fill the offices and they were eagerly seized by those on the outside. The result of the balloting, oratory and perspiration was as follows: E. H. OCHSNER, President; J. B. CANAVAN, Vice-President; H. M. HAYES, Secretary; E. B. McALLISTER, Treasurer; T. E. ANDRE, Valedictorian; A. T. CORLISS, Chaplain; JOHN ROSS, Historian; F. W. MILLER, Prophet; J. V. RUSSELL, Chorister; O. B. BOCK, Sergeant-at-arms, and E. P. LIERLE, E. L. WYCKOFF, B. N. CLARK, W. E. NICHOLS, and C. H. MANNING members of the Executive Committee.

During this year we have had a great many new ideas advanced by our class. Especially in the arena where each one was desirous of displaying his various accomplishments were these new opinions often introduced. A sliver as large as a tree was spoken of by an embryo surgeon; tuberculosis of the lung was found as pus in the left axilla; absence of hairs in the eye-lashes was a prominent symptom in a certain case; immobilization by a plaster of paris splint was recommended for treating an anchylosed joint; tracheotomy has been recently performed on the œsophagus in operative surgery; ligation of the œsophagus was classed as a capital operation by one of our number; warts, corns and bunions were considered formidable affections; a new dance was learned on the midway and reproduced in the arena; twenty-two set of whiskers were raised, each set being valued at fifteen hundred dollars; a visit was made to the insane asylum at Dunning, where osculation and dancing were freely indulged in; one student is puzzled about feeding a patient through an intubation tube. When an actor called out, "Is there a medical man in the house?" one of our men was there. One of our men spelled skin with two N's and now wishes he had written hide. We have wandered about unconsciously for a month and finally came to our senses in a hospital, and the surgery of the marriage covenant has been ably discussed by one of our class-mates.

In the Cook County Hospital examinations our class has maintained the high reputation of the college by furnishing four of the eight internes. In other hospitals where pulls were not considered our class secured many positions. The Faculty offered two prizes exclusively to seniors for the best theses upon diphtheria. The first was awarded to Mr. C. D. CENTER and the second to Mr. A. T. STEWART. In the competition for the Daniel Brainard gold medal we again showed our superiority as dissectors, for the first two places were secured by Mr. F. W. BYRNES and Mr. G. C. WAISS respectively.

The most attractive features of our senior year was our class meetings, of which we had many. We will append an account of one meeting: The president was in the chair. "Rain-in-the-face," with a blood-curdling whoop, moves that the class roll be put on the invitations, seconded by "Sharp and Smith." The president puts the motion and 137 of the 138 present arises to speak and each one speaks. "Tarsi" being deaf sits still. "Warhorse" objects, for no one can pronounce his name if it were all over the invitations. "Mrs. Ganson's" ankylosed face will not move and she sits down. "Tensor" wants Mrs. G. to speak; "Sliver" objects; KIRBY begins to study; Trueman lashes his arms, roars, perspires, and hurling a threat at the opposite side, wants to wager his chances for getting plucked that he will never have his name on the invitation. "The-young-man-afraid-of-the-professors" wants anything but a position at the stock yards. "Riordan" says, "Vy are ve all here togedder anyhow?" "Whiskers" wants to be heard; "Shorty" wants to read a committee report; "Chrysalobin" asks the president to call him Doctor. The "Boodler" calls for business. "Papa" says this is worse than a whole nursery of babies. Artie requests the loan of two dollars. "Cope" pulls his whiskers; "Lottie" sings Ta-ra-ra; the president calls for silence and says not more than 117 would be allowed to talk at once, for that annoyed him. "Flagpole" calls for blood; "Della" objects; "Lord Fauntleroy" wants silence so he can sleep; Jewell tells a story; "No. 15" takes his seat; "Mrs. Lease" still speaks loudly; "Jerry Baldy" pulls his back hair; "Windy" dances his favorite ballet; "Medical Man" arrests "Frogeater," and the meeting adjourns with 123 men talking. These items were partly taken from the secretary's report and are substantially correct.

College life with its pleasures and happy surroundings has many dark places, and three times in our course we were reminded that life at most is short. Only a few months ago we were apprised that Mr. E. L. WYCKOFF was dangerously sick in the Presbyterian Hospital. Day after day when inquiry was made at his room the nurse or attending physician could give us no hope that he was growing better. Finally it was announced that his mother had arrived to see him, and only a few hours later that he was dead. No one not in contact with the class can imagine our sadness when we held a meeting that bright morning and made arrangements to pay the last tribute of respect to the life of our fellow class-mate, which had so suddenly gone out just in the morning of his usefulness, and in the prime and vigor of life. He was honored by receiving a position as class officer, respected by all of his class for his frankness and liberality. Mr. BEHLE was sent to accompany the remains to his home at Rock Rapids, Iowa, resolutions of condolence were drafted, and the class did all in their power to console the sorrowful friends and relatives.

As we leave Rush our life study has only begun. We have laid only the foundation for a medical education; we must continue to study if we expect to keep pace with the rapid advances in medicine. We ask your best wishes for our future success, and promise to strive faithfully to maintain the high reputation of Rush, and to hold sacred the dignity of our chosen profession, ever looking upward to our motto, "Scientia et Humanitas."

JOHN ROSS.

Class Prophecy

DELIVERED ON CLASS DAY, MAY 21, 1894.

Mr. President, Honorable Faculty, Class-mates, Ladies and Gentlemen:

Now it came to pass as I tarried with my books that the hour did arrive in which I must of necessity hie me to my couch.

That meal which the landlady extolled in words such as are becoming only to landladies did gnaw and even tear away at my vitals.

In sooth it was of that baser sort that incites a feeble stomach to rise and mutiny.

It was well-nigh the hour when the church-yards yawn and solid girls do likewise.

Then I replaced my books upon their shelves, and taking off my garments did retire—my head all filled with epiblastic tumors, my stomach with things much worse.

Verily, I was weighed down and sorely grieved, for slumber visited not mine eyelids, neither did sweet Morpheus come my way.

At length, after much tossing and weariness, I slumbered; but my slumbers were not such as a babe sleepeth, for gruesome things did haunt me—thoughts weird and ghastly chased each other across my wearied brain, scorpions did rend my flesh, and slimy serpents with forked tongues did crawl upon me and make me to writhe.

Now it came to pass as I wrestled with these things unnatural and uncanny that at length I found myself in a forest dark and thick.

I know not how I got there, nor yet where it was. It mattered little. No sound to break the silence so oppressive save the occasional hoot of a distant owl and the sighing of the wind in its course through the tree-tops.

Yea, verily, it was dark—so dark, in fact, that e'en one of Pharaoh's own body guards might well have lost his way.

And as I sat and did commune with myself—lo, there did appear a small uncertain light shining through the underbushes, and when I did behold it I straightway took heart, and smiting my thigh with my palm said, "By the sword of the prophet, this is my deliverance;" and as I thus did commune with myself, the light e'en so drew near unto me, and as it came still closer I saw that it was a torch of pine knot that a form all bent and tottering carried in his withered hand.

He was old, yea, very old; his hoary locks did fall in great abundance from his temples, now so hollow, until anastomosing with a beard, still more white, almost concealed his face.

He came upon me. He must have known of my presence, for there was no surprise when he beheld me.

Now it came to pass that as he gazed upon me he did draw himself up to the full stature of manhood, and placing his thumbs in the axillary spaces of his toga, viewed me in the most oppressive way, and having gazed did shake his head and say in tones most sarcastic: "So you indeed are he whom the class of '94 hast sent to me that their future might be revealed. It behooves me to say that I am in truth surprised and disappointed. Suffer me, I pray thee, to see thy credentials." Thereupon with trembling I did hand him a letter that our worthy president had given unto me as I set forth upon my journey. He read it in silence and having finished it said, "Very well. First I will tell you who I am. My name is Future. The past I know not of. The present lasteth but a moment. While I, Future, contain all the probabilities and possibilities of the destinies of men. I live only in the things that are to come. This portion of the earth and the fullness thereof is mine, and in it are all these things contained you shall to-night, if eyes and ears you use, a lesson learn that will abide within your memory so long as the Nile runneth to the sea and the soil of the Sahara is athirst. Follow me and e'en these things shall be shown unto you," and girding up his loins he led the way. And it came to pass after we had journeyed over fallen trees and briars that did scratch and e'en forsooth tear my raiment, that we at length did come before a cavern large and still and even blacker than the Stygian darkness round about us, set between two boulders, large and awful in their greatness. Bats and winged animals, the like of which I ne'er had seen, did fly against the light and made it to flicker e'en more than before.

I was in sooth sore stricken and sick at heart, and methought: "Verily, I have bitten off more than I can chew, and peradventure some accident will befall me. Suffer me, I pray thee, to depart and forbid me not." But he only laughed and mocked my cowardice. Seeing that it availed me naught, I straightway took my hypodermic out and did inject a sixtieth of strychnine into my arm e'en unto the deeper tissues. He then moved calmly forward—I followed, but not with eagerness. On and on and still downward we did go towards the very center of the earth.

The air coming from Plutos' sulphurous realm was thick and stifling, but that strychnia was getting in its work, and nothing daunted I followed.

At length we suddenly stopped, a large rock did block our way. He made a few passes strange and Hermannlike, and the gigantic boulder was rolled away, and there before me did appear a sight that only Dante and myself have ever seen.

A caldron huge and dirty sputtered and tried to boil over a sickly fire. I stepped forward and peered in, and there in shapeless confusion did I see bits of matriculation and general tickets for RUSH and those odious sealed envelopes. I added a tear or two to the boil and hurried after the old man, who was restlessly awaiting me. But another rock, still greater than the one before we stood.

The old gentleman, sticking his torch in a crevice of the rock and turning to me, said, "Behold this adamantine rock. Behind it is concealed the future of your class. To thee alone it shall be revealed if you but write the things just as you see them, and then if your class-mates fain would let their angry passions rise, reason with them saying, 'Keep your tunics on, for whom the Faculty destroy they first make mad.'" Now he did make the passage as before and the massive rock parted, and as I gazed with exophthalmic eyes through the fissure that was made, I saw even these things that I now give unto you.

Now it came to pass as I gazed through the crevice that there did appear before mine eyes a sign-board fifteen cubits wide and thirty cubits long, and written thereon with a red pigment were these words that all might read, "CHAS. D. CENTER, Manicure and Chiropodist," and as I gazed upon this sign behold there did appear this man, and lifting up his voice said unto me: "Lo, these many years have I toiled and tried to be professional, but my purse waxed not fat, neither did anything stick to my ribs; but now I have changed, and shekels in great abundance are mine and likewise houses and lands."

The next scene that appeared was at a patient's bedside, and there I did behold one KEITH (commonly known as Stock Yards Willie). A large rope he held in his nerveless fingers. On his face were signs of supreme agony. The patient was growing paler and paler, she was evidently bleeding to death and KEITH seemed powerless to prevent it. I ventured to ask him why he tarried thus, and he said in tones so weak as to be scarcely understood, "Forsooth, I have forgotten where the post-partum artery doth reside, for I fain would tie it; but now, alas, she hath perished and I alone am the cause of it." I was about to ask him if he remembered of having ever heard while at RUSH of compressing the aorta. But another slide was now put in.

This one was down in Posey county, where the paw-paws grow and the grasshopper becomes a burden. It was a typical farm-yard scene such as Eggleston describes, and seated in the midst thereof and on an averted basket was NOAH THOMPSON, apparently happy and contented. He was busily engaged in trying to find out how much back salary was due him from the Big 4 railroad, and would occasionally take time enough to look up and rebuke one of the many small dirty-faced children that were playing around, that resembled him considerably and were very prone to do evil.

How changed, thought I, and yet another beautiful example of the eternal fitness of things. I could not help but shed a tear, for he was once my roommate, and as I gazed with tear-stained eyes on the picture now fast disappearing, behold there came to view a scene of different nature.

It was on the north side. There was a mammoth building with a sign-board of large dimensions which read, "WINDMUELLER & BOCK's Summer Garden. Performance now going on." I, of course, stepped inside. The first one I met was EMIL. His body large and encumbered with flesh, his face like unto a full moon. He took me into the concert hall, and there I saw a large multitude of our class-mates seated in small groups around the tables, and drinking a peculiar liquid of an amber hue, on the top of which a white foam like unto that made by barbers. While listening in horror at their jabberings and comments on the merits of each respective star as he appeared, one Von Bismarck stepped upon the stage. After the applause had died out he took a cough drop and sang with wonderful pathos and feeling that beautiful ballad, written by himself, entitled, "I am the man who won the Brainard prize." The emphasis on the I was particularly noticeable.

We then did go outside into the barroom. EMIL said there is another of our class-mates here perhaps you would like to see him, and taking me to the box-office I saw W. L. THOMPSON selling seats. WINDY said, "You see he was such a good man with seats that we could not get along without him."

He then showed me some large oil paintings of his friends. One particularly do I remember, it was that of EADES. All it needed was a wind machine fastened to it to make it as natural as life. "This," he said, "I value most highly, for he was my dearest friend."

We now went outside the building and EMIL called my attention to two old men sitting on the pavement asking alms of passersby. "Do you see those fellows there?" said he, "They are BEST and BAKER. They exhausted all of their nerve while at RUSH and have been total wrecks ever since." Methought, "The mills of the gods grind slowly, but they grind exceedingly fine."

I bade WINDMUELLER a hasty adieu and started down the street, and as I strolled along whom should I meet but our own sweet TARSI. He said in tones convincing that he now did hold a chair in RUSH. I plucked my button from my coat and cast it from me; but when he told me that this chair he fain did hold was in the coal department, I did compose myself, for RUSH was saved and we might again rejoice. Now it came to pass as I talked with TARSI that sweet strains of Wagnerian music did fall upon my ear, and as I listened, behold the vibrations did increase, until at length there did come upon the scene one DE VERE, the mighty man from Montana, his whiskers being tossed by the festive breeze, that seemingly did enjoy its gambols with his hirsutes. At last methought those whiskers are of some avail.

The next I saw was our most worthy Ex-Com., and even now I did perceive that they had on a beautiful and picturesque jag, and when I did inquire the cause of this undue hilarity, one NICHOLS, nicknamed the Short, then did say, "E'en so, we got our names on the invitations and now we do rejoice."

There now did appear a store on Clark street, and over the entrance thereto hung three golden balls, and still above these were the words, COLLINS & DOWNEY, Loan Brokers."

Then did I see WESTON (that pretty creature not made for profane hands to touch) lecturing at the Woman's Medical College. He was telling the young creatures where the duct of the spleen did empty, whereupon one ancient maid did swoon and faint away, and was regaled to the outer air until she did revive.

The next I saw was in a Sunday school. And there before the young innocents stood SKINNER, telling them the beautiful story of Ananias and Sapphira; while MORRIS played the organ and KING passed the hat. I also noticed ALLEN, HICKMAN and HAMMOND teaching classes. I suppose "there was a method in their madness."

After Supt. SKINNER had finished his story, and the moist eyes had been dried and the sobs had died out, he said: "Now, children, I want to show you what drink will do for men, so that you seeing may take warning from their dreadful example." He thereupon led forth MAMMON and PETERS, both looking like the pictures one sees in the W. C. T. U. papers, and both alike ready for drunkards' graves. It was indeed a sad sight to behold, and while they stood before the audience, MAMMON was trying to kill a couple of snakes he saw crawl out of PETERS' shoe. Supt. SKINNER then said, "Children, no words are necessary. It speaks for itself. Now let us rise and sing in closing the first and last stanzas of that beautiful hymn by Bro. TRUMAN entitled, 'Let not your angry passions rise.'"

The next scene was quite different in its character. A penitentiary, and there behind the bars in clothes that would make a tennis blazer blush for shame, were HUNT and RUSSELL. Their beautiful whiskers all shaved off, their hair likewise, and it was very evident that getting their daylight in little square chunks did not agree with them. I only had a word with them, for they were hurried off to their work—HUNT to painting wheelbarrows and RUSSELL to the laundry. I inquired of Warden ELKINGTON what they were in for, and he told me in that same wise way that RUSSELL had been caught stealing from his own trunk and HUNT was in for bigamy.

The next I saw was COPELAND. He had a large basket in his hand, and when I asked him what he did with it, he told me that he had a job carrying microbes from the dispensary upstairs on clinic days, and on the other days he carried them down again.

I next saw ROWE, the man with the anchylosed face. He told me that he and GANSON were divorced, for whenever they worked the Faculty, GANSON always got the biggest slice.

I looked at my watch and found that if I wanted to be in time for the lecture I must hurry back. I started and stumbled over a large stone. I awoke. I found myself on the floor. I had fallen from bed.

The Study of Medicine

OPENING ADDRESS OF SESSION OF '94-'95, DELIVERED BY

Arthur Dean Bevan, M. D.

SEPT. 25TH, '94, IN COLLEGE AMPHITHEATER.

TO-NIGHT marks for us the beginning of a new year's work in the study of medicine. It is my pleasing duty to welcome back to the Alma Mater the old students, and to extend to the new matriculates the hand of fellowship of the great science to which they have chosen to consecrate their lives. In the opening address customary at these formal exercises let me discuss briefly with you the study of Medicine under these heads: Medicine a Science, American Medical Schools, The Equipment of a Medical School, The Equipment of a Medical Student, Undergraduate Work and Post-graduate Work.

MEDICINE A SCIENCE.

I congratulate the student who to-day begins his medical studies, for medicine has assumed the dignity of a science. The sciences of Anatomy, Physiology, Chemistry, Pathology, Bacteriology and Materia Medica form the firm foundation of Medicine, and upon these sciences the practice of Medicine and Surgery and Obstetrics are built. The intelligent world recognizes that there can be but one science of medicine, and as a result the old medical dogmas have been cast aside and find no place except in the masquerade of the ignorant and the charlatan. Modern Medicine is a science and can have no nationality. The English, the German, the French, the Italian, the American schools of medicine are practically identical, all are working for a common object, all employ the same methods. Each nation adds its share to the common store of medical knowledge. Within a few years the French have given to the world the foundations of Bacteriology. The Germans have made Pathology a science and have added to almost every department of medicine. The English have furnished the greatest discovery of the century in antiseptic surgery. America can be proud of its contributions, anæsthetics and abdominal surgery.

Medical journalism, international congresses, the increasing number of men who have access to English, French and German medical literature, the increasing number of men who spend their wander jahr in the universities of other countries, have aided greatly in giving medicine an international character. This international character of the science and art of medicine makes it necessary for all countries to employ the same methods in the teaching of medicine. This we find to be now approximately the case.

This has not always been so.

AMERICAN SCHOOLS.

For very definite and uncontrollable reasons America for many years lagged behind both in the practice and in the teaching of Medicine. Our democratic form of government, the newness of the country, the rapid increase in material wealth and its blind pursuit, were not suited to the foundation of great scientific institutions nor to the production of a class of men to be satisfied with a plodding and illy paid scientific career. This condition has fortunately changed. With the maturing of large communities has come a recognition for art and science, and this recognition has given birth to the institutions and the men who have placed American Medicine and our best American Medical schools in a position where they are not excelled by those of any country in the world.

A medical student can obtain as thorough a training in the large educational centers of this country as he can in London or Berlin, Paris or Vienna. In original research work, the highest aim of a university, we are still behind, but in this, too, we are making rapid progress.

On the continent and in Great Britain the standard of the medical schools is uniform. In America there is a regrettable lack of a uniform standard, and there are still many schools of a low grade, but the tendency is toward such rapid improvement that we are warranted in feeling enthusiastic for the future of American medicine. The American Medical College Association is doing much to bring about the desired uniformity. Possibly no community in this country could furnish a better example of the development of fifty years in the teaching of medicine than does Chicago.

Fifty years ago the one medical college in Chicago consisted of a single room and four instructors; there was no hospital, no dispensary; there were no laboratories; the course required was two terms of sixteen weeks each. Improvements were gradually and continuously made until the two years were lengthened to four, the term of sixteen weeks to eight months. A large dispensary and a large hospital have become a part of the college, complete laboratories have been built and equipped, the teaching force of four men has grown to sixty. The history of medical schools in the other large centres of the United States has been almost a repetition of the same story.

During this period of evolution American schools could be and they were criticised by the British and continental schools for their lack of facilities and their low standard. These critics did not understand the conditions and difficulties with which American medicine had to contend.

If they had they would have seen that these pioneers in medical teaching were accomplishing their work in the only way that it could be accomplished, and that they were deserving of all praise; they would have recognized the necessary steps in the evolution that would place American schools on a parity with their own. There is still much to be accomplished, much to be desired. In the future development of medicine America must be an important factor.

THE EQUIPMENT OF A MEDICAL COLLEGE.

A medical college should be in a large centre of population from which it can draw clinical material. It should have closely associated with it a large hospital and dispensary. It must have access to a large supply of pathological material. It must have fully equipped college and laboratory facilities. It must have sufficient revenue and endowment to enable it to command the best talent for its teaching force. The future American medical school will form a part of a large and well endowed university.

THE EQUIPMENT OF THE STUDENT.

It is desirable that men who begin the study of medicine should have a technical preparatory education. Such education should include a limited amount of Latin and Greek, and a thorough course in the natural sciences and modern languages. Such a technical education is of great value to a medical student. However, it is a fact that many of the men who have made great names for themselves have lacked this early training.

UNDERGRADUATE MEDICAL WORK.

The function of a medical school is limited to the training of men in those subjects and in such a way that they may become practicing physicians and surgeons. A medical school cannot make experts of its students in the sciences which are studied. To be an expert chemist or an expert pathologist means a life's work. These sciences are to be studied with the idea that the student must obtain from them those facts which will be of service to him in his practical work. The medical course should cover four years.

The first year is devoted to Anatomy, Physiology, Chemistry and Materia Medica. These subjects are to be taught by lectures, recitations and practical laboratory and dissecting-room work. The introduction of compulsory recitation work is to be regarded as a great improvement. In Germany a medical student has very little compulsory work; he takes out the required number of courses and is expected at the end of his time to have passed the required examination. This system produces, as one of Germany's great pathological teachers has said, two classes of students, very good and very poor students. The ambitious men take advantage of all opportunities offered, the lazy men do little or no work. Compulsory work does not affect the high grade men in a class, but it does produce a better general average.

The practical work consists of dissections in Anatomy, microscopical work in Histology, laboratory work in Physiology, in Chemistry and in Materia Medica, and lastly we must mention the lectures, which are a systematic presentation of each subject by the professor in charge. Formerly the teaching of medicine consisted almost entirely of didactic lectures; these now divide the field with recitations and laboratory work. Didactic lectures have their own peculiar place in the teaching of medicine which they will always retain. Their object is to place before the student a systematic review of a subject, to explain intricate and emphasize important points, to give the student an idea of what he must know, so that he can more intelligently do his recitation and laboratory work.

The second year completes the study of Anatomy, Physiology, Chemistry and Materia Medica, and takes up also the study of Pathology and Bacteriology. The first two years are devoted exclusively to the study of the sciences upon which medicine is founded. These sciences teach the structure of the human body, its functions and its chemistry. They teach the gross and microscopical appearance of diseased tissues. They teach the source and chemistry and preparation of the materials used in medicine.

The third and fourth years of a medical course are devoted to the study of the practical branches—Medicine, Surgery and Obstetrics; and the special branches which have grown out of these, as Gynæcology, Eye and Ear, Diseases of the Skin, Nose and Throat, etc. These subjects are studied by lectures and recitations, the practical work being in the form of clinics and the manual training school courses, in bandaging, in the use of the ophthalmoscope and stethoscope and laryngoscope, course in operative surgery on the cadaver, and obstetrical courses on the phantom. In his college course a student reviews the sciences upon which medicine is based. He reviews the practical branches of medicine. His hand and eye and ear take their first lessons in the art of medicine.

Still with all this knowledge and training his own, he must recognize that he has but commenced the study of medicine.

POST-GRADUATE WORK.

After graduation the aim of the medical student should be to obtain a hospital appointment. A year or two in a hospital under a good staff, with the opportunity of putting to practical use the knowledge which he has acquired, the opportunities of working under good men, seeing their successes and mistakes, is worth many times the same amount of time spent in private practice. To obtain such a position is worth almost any sacrifice.

The young medical man should regard his entering into practice as the beginning of post-graduate work. In it he must acquire greater facility in the means of diagnosis. He must acquire greater dexterity in the use of instruments. He must acquire from results confidence in himself and the methods he employs. He must keep up with the knowledge of his day by following the medical literature; by bringing himself in contact with the leaders in medicine, and familiarizing himself with their work. He should be ambitious to master the modern languages and gain access to their literature. He should be ambitious to see the work done in other countries, which will give him confidence in that done in his own. He must be ever guided by the sense that it is his duty to give to his patients the benefit of the best knowledge and the best skill that his generation affords. No man whose ambition is to make money should choose a medical career. What is he to look forward to? If he is successful he will earn a living; he may amass a competency. If he acquires a love for scientific work, he will find that his work is a constant source of interest and pleasure. His professional career gives him a wide horizon. It brings him in contact with every phase of life; his is the opportunity of doing much good. In front of him are great undiscovered truths of science. It may be his to give some great boon to humanity and leave, like Jenner and Lister, Morton and Simpson, an indelible impress on the history of the world. In the human tragedy the physician plays an important part.

In Greece, more than two thousand years ago, a young man began his medical studies under a great physician and repeated after his preceptor this oath: "I swear by Apollo, the physician, and Æsculapius and Health and Allheal, and all the gods and goddesses that, according to my ability and judgment, I will keep this oath and stipulation—to reckon him who taught me this art equally dear to me as my parents, to share my substance with him, and relieve his necessities if required; to look upon his offspring in the same footing as my own brothers, and to teach them this art, if they wish to learn it, without fee or stipulation; and that by precept, lecture and every other mode of instruction, I will impart a knowledge of this art to my own sons, and to those of my teachers, and to disciples bound by a stipulation and oath according to the law of medicine, but to none others. I will follow that system of regimen which, according to my ability and judgment, I consider for the benefit of my patients, and abstain from whatever is deleterious and mischievous. I will give no deadly medicine to any one if asked, nor suggest any such counsels and in like manner I will not give to a woman the means to produce abortion. With purity and with holiness I will pass my life and practice my art. I will not cut persons laboring under stone, but will leave this to be done by men who are practitioners of this work. Into whatever houses I enter I will go into them for the benefit of the sick, and will abstain from every voluntary act of mischief and corruption. Whatever, in connection with my professional practice or not, I see or hear in the life of men which ought not to be spoken of abroad, I will not divulge, as reckoning that all such should be kept secret. While I continue to keep this oath unviolated, may it be granted to me to enjoy life and the practice of the art, respected by all men in all times! But should I trespass and violate this oath may the reverse be my lot."

To-night, like that young Greek, you begin your medical studies under the guidance of your Alma Mater. It is her wish that ere you cross the threshold of her door you pause and read, "Medicine is for him and for him only who masters its science and its art and employs them for the good of mankind."

Rush Medical College Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association

Motto:—“A sound mind in a sound body, dominated by a sound will.”

THE beautiful home for young men, the West Side Building, located at 542 Monroe Street, near Ashland, is open all day and evening as a rendezvous for medical students. The pleasant parlors, game rooms, well stocked reading room, bath rooms, bowling alleys, bicycle storage, and gymnasium combine to make it so indeed. An attractive meeting on Sundays at four o'clock is a profitable feature also. The special student's gymnasium class under a competent leader is in successful operation. But the game of basket ball is what eclipses all else in genuine pleasurable interest, as well as the physical development that necessarily follows.

The work in the college consists of a “Fall Campaign,” which is designed to help new students in getting located; also the carrying of a weekly meeting for students, and conducted by students, Professors and leading Pastors of the neighborhood. This work is in charge of an organization committee which consists this year of the following officers:

E. J. WITT, Chairman.

W. D. BRODE, Vice-Chairman.

M. T. BREWER, Secretary.

DR. JOHN EDWIN RHODES is chairman of the Inter-Collegiate Department, which embraces all the leading professional schools of the city.

EDITORIAL.

Prominent among the interesting mementos that adorn the north wall of the college amphitheater is an attractive and unique frescoed design whose suggestiveness might escape the casual observer; carefully regarded, however, it is of unusual interest. It was painted shortly after the enlargement of the present clinical arena, but attracted little or no attention, except as a decoration, the fitness of which was neither criticised nor praised.

PSEUDOPODIA—A WARNING.

A man is going about the country, says a neighborhood paper, claiming to be John the Baptist. He has dark hair and chin whiskers and looks like a farmer. The editor goes on in a friendly adjuration: "We desire to warn our readers if he

The Corpuscle

HE many incidents connected with the early life of THE CORPUSCLE have already been enumerated in detail by Dr. Chas. Center in the PULSE of last year; but for the benefit of the hundreds of new students who have since chosen Rush to be their alma mater, a few of the early incidents will be repeated.

To Dr. E. S. Goodhue, '92, now located at Riverside, Cal., is given the honor of being the person to furnish the idea of publishing a medical college journal, and to edit and publish the first copy of THE CORPUSCLE, November 1, 1890—the first publication of its kind in the United States.

Dr. G. in his salutatory editorial said: "It is called THE CORPUSCLE because we expect it to circulate throughout the college system, and have a part to do in helping to build up and strengthen the organization which it pervades. It will be the students' organ, since everything has an organ, and not an official publication, although it goes out with the approval and assistance of our Faculty. I expect to see half a dozen medical college journals within half a year after the appearance of THE CORPUSCLE."

The first issue, a twelve-page edition, abounded in original notes and short newsy articles concerning the college and students, and judging from an announcement on one of the last pages, "that there will probably be a second issue in April, 1891," we infer that it was not the intention at that time, or at least not thought possible, to publish a monthly journal. The second edition appeared July 1, 1891, edited and managed by eleven editors. It soon became manifest, however, that so large a representation was detrimental, therefore the Board was reduced to five and the business management was placed in the hands of W. J. Anderson, who either directly or indirectly managed this department until July, 1894. The demands for enlargement and improvement could not be satisfactorily complied with by one whose only interest in the journal was a monetary interest, and an unsuccessful effort was made in 1893 to place the management with those who were otherwise interested in the paper and school. This change was finally successfully made, and since September, 1894, the management has been with representatives of the Board.

The Faculty have become supporters of the medium by way of furnishing articles and clinical reports for its columns.

The alumni have adopted it as their official organ.

The students find in its columns an ever open opportunity to express themselves, on the condition that such expressions be signed.

More than a half dozen student journals have been started since 1891, and their fates have varied, some having survived, while others, for various reasons, have already become a part of the past. While in the beginning the journal was strictly a student's paper, circumstances have demanded that this idea be modified, inasmuch as so large a number of the alumni have manifested so pronounced an interest, therefore enlargements have from time to time been made, so that at the present fifty-six instead of twelve pages are found within its covers. To be sure this shows a growth which has, however, been made with greater difficulty than it seems ought to have been experienced.

There surely can be no better field for a medical publication than exists here at Rush, with her large and influential Faculty, her 800 students and 6,000 alumni. Upon such a staunch institutional foundation, the journal of Rush Medical College, filled with clinical reports of her superior amphitheater clinics, timely articles written by her most able instructors, special interesting cases reported by members of her numerous alumni, and a more liberal contribution of notes by the students, can be made second to none other of the land. No existing special department need in any way be neglected, but all can be emphasized and improved; some, however, more emphatically correspondingly than others, and when circumstances demand new departments, space can be given as it has been to the well conducted alumni and athletic departments.

It is very evident that a very large percentage of the existing medical journals are published and pushed by a collection of men as a personal advertisement, or by some corporation to get their goods before the medical world, and consequently lack dignity and tone in appearance, with a wrong aim; such it does not seem ought to be the foundation upon which any medical journal should rest; but instead of that there should be a common tie that would hold together a sufficient goodly number of individuals and supporters, contributors and readers of a journal published for their especial interests and enjoyment. Such a foundation it seems belongs to THE CORPUSCLE, and by real experience have the many obstacles of the past been removed, so that the present is but the door or epoch to a hopeful future.

A Plea

An impromptu sent to Prof. Cotton, just before examination.

T makes us or it mars us: think on that
And fix most kind thy resolution."
All are would-be doctors, doctor,
Every mother's son;
All have studied physic, too,
In earnest or in fun.
Some are only boys, doctor,
With all the marks of youth,
With faces smooth and noisy pranks,
And confidence forsooth.
Some are turning gray, doctor,
With fleece as white as snow,
While some have lost all trace of hair
Whereon it used to grow.

Some are housed in rooms, doctor,
The sight of which would wake
Your tender sympathetic sense,
For very pity's sake.

And if you saw the food, doctor,
Or tasted it to see,
On what your students oft are fed,
Melted your heart would be;
For they have hash and hash, doctor,
And hash and hash and hash,
Until their exclamations reach
The verge of something rash;
And though all pious Medics, doc,
'Tis more than they can bear,
To find hard gristle in the hash,
And butter mixed with hair.

Then some are fairly wed, doctor,
And stand as best they may,
The double lectures which they must Take notes on every day.
And don't you pity those, doctor,
Who, single, hourly pine
For sweets they know not of, but which Intoxicate like wine!
Ah! some are homely and some fair, doctor,
Some jolly and some sad;
And some are very, very good,
And some are very bad;
But all are anxious now, doctor,
If you will bid them go,
To leave these learned halls in peace,
And practice what they know.

For 'tis the wish of all, doctor,
To gain a normal growth
In body and in pocket-book,
In either or in both.
So bend your heart in love, doctor,
Full mindful of our lot;
Remember our cerebral lobes
Have learned much and forgot;
And we shall give you cheer, doctor,
When we are doctors, too,
And all the world will never know
How much we ever knew.

The Anatomist's Ode to his Love

PRELUDE.

HE expression of love from her eyes so keen,
As they beam on another in a far distant land,
Is a pleasure to feel — it can never be seen,
Save you walk with my love, heart in heart, hand in hand.

I list while thy heart and ascending aorta,
Their volumes of valvular harmony pour,
And my soul from this vascular music has caught a
New life from this dry anatomical lore.
Those beautiful orbs they are haunting me still,
As they roll 'neath the palpebral, dimly translucent,
Obeying in silence the magical will
Of thy oculo-motor, pathetic abducent.
Oh! thy cornea, love, has a radiant light,
As the sparkle that laughs in the icicle's gleam,
And thy crystalline lens, like a diamond bright,
Through the quivering frame of thine iris is seen.
Thou has stolen the charm from my studio dim,
And I turn from dissections embittered with wrath;
Thou has stepped betwixt me and my skeleton grim;
Oh, Lady, fair Lady, why cross'd thou my path?

It is a happy suggestion of Prof. C.'s that some of the boys who are afraid to attempt a recitation "have their backbones laundered."

Said COTTON to a freshman, as he roused him with a start,
"Can you tell us the effect of digitalis on the heart?"
The startled freshman quick replied, "It quickeneth the beat."
"But how?" He could not answer and sadly took his seat.

For illustration, take a mule who's always loath to start,
Then ply the whip — the effect is like the drugs upon the heart.
What is it works this wondrous change and brings him to a run?
'Tis merely that you stimulate his "motor ganglion."

“Heart Failure”

He shuffled along the scaffold walk,
 Nor heeded the dizzy height,
 Then having dumped his mortar out,
 He turned and passed to the right.
 He stumbled — grasped to save himself,
 His downward course to check;
 He dropped about a hundred feet,
 And lit upon his neck.

Did he die?
 Yes.
 Dislocated neck?
 No. Heart failure.

He skated on the river's ice,
 The night was crisp and clear;
 The city being so close at hand,
 There were no wolves to fear.
 On, on he sped with lightning speed,
 The town more distant grew,
 A hole — a splash — a gurgle, and
 He disappeared from view.

Did he die?
 Yes.
 Drowned?
 No. Heart failure.

He loved his Nell for many years,
 He loved her hard and well,
 But never had the courage his Affection strange to tell.
 He nerved himself at last one night,
 As by her side he sat;
 He only got as far as “Nell,”
 Then asked, “Where was I at?”

Paralyzed?
 No. Heart failure.

They were sitting in the carriage,
 Waiting for their chaperone —
 “Oh, give me just one little kiss
 While waiting here alone.”

“No, Charles, that goes for tapping shoes,
 Or pressing trousers straight,
 But we draw the line distinctly
 At these ‘kisses while you wait.’”

Stages

As a surgeon's clerk I find,
That they underrate my mind,
Though I show my dressers what they make mistakes in;
So my ardor soon expires,
And I seek the smoke-room fires,
Unless we get the very best of "takes-in."

When Medicine is my quest,
And the mysteries of the chest,
To reach a right conclusion oft is trying;
But if not certain quite,
Of a diagnosis right,
Perhaps am aided by the patient kindly dying.

Now my forte will always be
In the art of Surgery,
Of my skill in that there can be no denying.
First I use my eyes with care,
Then my fingers bring to bear,
Last my tongue, for fear the patient may be lying.

At length a longed degree,
Entitles to a fee,
Though a practice takes for most a deal of making;
Still if knowledge is my friend,
'Twill be all right in the end;
But if not, 'twill be a long-continued "take-in."

PEGRAM says his coat has acquired a peculiar odor for which he cannot account. He isn't sure but some of those little dark animals may have taken a shot at him.

FRESHMAN BANKS, (after Prof. B. had correctly stated the explanation)—"Just what I meant, Professor, but I couldn't say it."—(10)?

Professor HAINES was absent from the city for some days in giving expert testimony in the Graves murder trial in Denver, Col. A few days after his return he announced to the class that he must go away again on account of another trial at Cleveland. He explained that he could not tell when he would return, for "in law, as in love, courting was so uncertain."

Doing the Best that It can

W AY up on the Perch, with wits all asearch,
Sits the emptiest head of the class;
His thoughts may be few, for the subject is new,
And Dame Nature has placed his gray matter askew.
Of grit he has much, of culture but few;
But let him alone as you pass,
He's doing the best that he can.

Down a side street is a small cottage neat,
A widow and young children three,
Who are making their bread and shelter o'er head
By starving some students and calling them fed;
But pay up your board bill and don't try to dead-
Head your way through the world, for you see
She's doing the best that she can.

And so let it be, whenever you see
An article doing its best,
Whether snake, brake or cancer, boil, ague or man, sir,
A saint with a halo, an opera dancer,
With very few garments perhaps to enhance her,
Let it quietly stay with the rest,
If it's doing the best that it can.—“NANNY.”

DR. LINNELL—What two kinds of matter do we have in the cord?

McKENNA, '95—Gray matter and Dura-Mater.

The Nu Sigma Nu members held an initiation and spread one evening recently. From appearances next day, we judge that the goat came out ahead.

MONTGOMERY—Have you been vaccinated, madame?

MADAME—I have, sir.

MONT.—Let me see the scar.

MAD. (who is large and fleshy)—I can't roll up my sleeve.

MONT.—Well, you will have to take off your dress.

MAD.—(Hesitating.)

MONT.—Oh, you needn't mind me, I am a married man.

MAD.—If you weren't married, I wouldn't mind showing you.

Exit Montgomery.

Place, 12th street; time, summer vacation.

Dr. JAY, who so bravely charged the raging feline at one of Prof. SENN's clinics, and triumphantly brought it back to the operating table, was observed to shed tears when the poor animal's abdomen was ripped open (scientifically and for the benefit of science, of course), and mournfully observed to his friend Dr. Shaw, "That only goes to show——," but tears choked his further utterance.

Have you observed BLANCHARD's whiskers? He cut them off. He sawed them off. He pulled them off. She chewed them off. He singed them off. He swore them off. And still his whiskers grew.

Prof. COTTON aptly explains the action of quinine on the white blood corpuscles in the following terse expression: Quinine arrests the amœboid motion of the lumbering leucocytes loafing around the red blood corpuscles.

O. M.—"What is the effect of too much food?"

HENDERSON—"Distention of the abdomen, sir."

INSTRUCTOR—"What would be the effect of attempting to pass too large a dilator to overcome stricture of esophagus?"

STUDENT—"Vomiting."

INSTRUCTOR—"No, that is not quite right."

Coachus: "Death," "Funeral," "Post Mortem," "Malpractice suit," "Shoving clouds," "A vacant chair," "Expert testimony."

"And my diagnosis is tuberculosis."—BREN-NER.

Dr. MELLISH—"Mr. Hobbs, describe the hip joint."

FRESHMAN H.—"I didn't study any further than the left hand."

Dr. M.—"Describe the shoulder, then."

F. H.—"I began at the elbow, doctor."

PATIENT — "Would whisky do me any harm?"

DOCTOR — "I think it would."

PATIENT — "That is fortunate; whisky is high these hard times."

FROM THE BENCHES.

It was a wee little baby, but it was a pretty baby. You could see that as the inhaling frame was lifted from time to time for more chloroform; and perhaps that was why the fellows stopped passing notes and whispering, and moved up forward in their seats so they could see better. We watched every little step in the operation, and we saw almost as quickly as the assistant that the babe had stopped breathing. We almost stopped breathing, too, and the tick of the clock and the rustle in the arena, as they lifted the little body, whose spark of life had almost ceased to glow, were the only noises you could hear. How intensely we watched every movement as they worked to bring back the glow and fan it to a flame. See, wasn't that a breath? No—yes—surely it was—yes—yes, baby is breathing again, and see its face looks better.

Yes, now the surgeon smiles. . . . How gladly we saw that, and we all took a deep breath and smiled, and some made the motion of a silent applause, and some closed their eyes and said their thanks. . . . It seemed as though The Great Physician had been for a moment in our midst.

STUDENT — "How can you determine the ulceration of Peyer's patches in typhoid fever?"

PROFESSOR — "By post-mortem."

Q. M.— "How many sides has the heart?"

"D. J." — "Two. The outside and the inside."

If you wish to see a good joke, turn to page 659 of Lyman's "Practice," and read the seventh line from the bottom. Perhaps the Professor himself has never noticed it.

They say, with faith all may be saved,
But we can see no hope
For the man in the dissecting room
Who stole the toilet soap.

The young man with the ticket in his hand hunting his seat has been here this year as usual.

Dr. B. is rather hard on himself. In class recently he made these two remarks: "Sometime ago a gentleman came to my office who was looking for the biggest quack in Chicago," . . . . . and . . . . . "When I was a young man I spent eight or nine years in an insane asylum."

No more we gamble for what's left
Of our dissected stiffs;
No more we scent our boarding house
With "dried cadaver" whiffs;
No more we boil or bury them,
For with emphatic tones
The demonstrator has announced,
"The college keeps the bones."

The new and improved methods in foot-ball and in surgery go forward hand in hand.

We heard one of the D. J.'s explaining that the building of the College of P. and S. was the Phosphorus and Sulphur college. So much for D. J. chemistry.

Appendicitis

AVE you got the new disorder?
If you haven't, 'tis in order
To succumb to it at once without delay.
It is called appendicitis,
Very different from gastritis,
Or the common trash diseases of the day.

It creates a happy frolic,
Something like a Winter colic,
That has often jarred our inner organs some.
Only wrestles with the wealthy,
And otherwise most healthy—
Having got it then, you're high to kingdom come.

Midway down in your intestine,
Its interstices infest in',
Is a little alley, blind and dark as night,
Leading off simply nowhere,
Catching all stray things that go there,
As a pocket it is clearly out of sight.

It is prone to stop and grapple
With the seed of grape or apple,
Or a soldier button swallowed with your pie;
Having levied on these chattels,
Then begin internal battles,
That are apt to end in mansions in the sky.

Once located, never doubt it,
You would never be without it;
It's a fad among society that's gay;
Old heart failure and paresis
Have decamped and gone to pieces,
And dyspepsia has fallen by the way.

Then stand back there, diabetes,
For here comes appendicitis,
With a brood of minor troubles on the wing;
So, vermiform, here's hoping
You'll withstand all drastic doping,
And earn the appellation, "Uncrowned King!"

A recent applicant before the Medical Examining Board of Texas was asked:

"What is histology?"

"Histology is the history of medicine."

"What system of medicine do you practice?"

"The Vanderbilt and St. Louis systems, and sometimes the homeopathic system."

"What is the homeopathic system, as you call it?"

"Sweatin' the patient."

He got his diploma.

In the Medical College

Lots of lungs and livers,
Heaps of heads and hearts,
Decaying human members
In several sundry parts.
Heavens! let me quickly
Give my cigar a whiff!
Bless me, this is pleasant,
Slicing up a stiff!
Dissecting room in college,
Eighteen flights of stairs;
Seventy fiendish medics
Working all in pairs.
Oversleeves and apron,
Carbolic acid, grease,
Little knives and tweezers,
A pipe or so apiece.

Now everything is ready,
Fun will soon begin;
Here on the slab before us
Lies what a maid has been.
But she's no longer pretty—
Her teeth have fallen out,
Leaving thus the matter of
Her age somewhat in doubt.
Her face has lost the freshness
Of maidenhood and youth;
Her skin is not quite "pearly,"
To tell the "naked" truth;
Her form is not exactly
What might be called divine,
And to raptures o'er her bosom
No poet would incline.
Now our gaze is fastened
Upon her skullless head,
And we are moved to wonder
How long she has been dead.

Now a blooming medic
With scalpel and a hook,
Commences while another
Reads to him from a book.
Cuts the epidermis,
Takes a careful look,
Other medic quickly
Names it from the book.
Slices out a muscle,
Fishes out a vein,
Finds a piece of tendon,
Applies a Latin name.
Lignum vitæ major,
Tyrannis semper sic,
Non compos mentis minor,
Habeas corpus hic,
Prehensile os femoris,
Posterior conjunct,
Ad libitum superbus,
Anterior defunct.

Sure no right minded mortal
Would ever dare surmise
He'd have so much of Latin
Left in him when he dies.
No wonder that the maiden
Made up her mind to die,
If I thought I had all those things,
Great Cæsar! so would I.
'Tis well the soul's immortal
And leaves this house of clay,
For wouldn't it be pleasant
To hear some medic say,
As he takes a pair of tweezers
And holds it up to view,
"We may observe quite plainly
The soul is split in two;
Our friend here who possessed it
Was a mugwump, we can bet,
Or perhaps was fond of smoking
The cubeb cigarette?"

No, some few things are sacred
From investigation's gaze;
They may slice and slash our carcass,
But our soul they cannot phase.
Oh! bless the blooming medics,
They will cure us of our ills,
They'll fill us full of physic,
They'll fill us full of pills;
They'll saw our little legs off,
They'll bandage up our head;
They'll cure us while we're living,
They'll carve us when we're dead.

Lots of lungs and livers,
Heaps of heads and hearts,
Decaying human members,
In several sundry parts.
Heavens! let me quickly
Give my cigar a whiff!
Bless me, this is pleasant
Slicing up a stiff!

The Medic's Dream

A plexus to complex the wise
Rose o'er my dreamy vision;
Its ears and nose and ghastly eyes
Leered on me in derision;
In cold fear trembling, then I cried:
"Say, Ghoul, what is your mission?"
"Fission," it said.

Then bones and muscles, veins and glands,
Came trooping in confusion,
With cells and strong elastic bands
To strengthen the illusion;
So, faltering, I murmured. "Friend,
Whence all this crepitation?"
"Depuration," it cried.

"You are a protophyte, and ought
To die of inflammation;
Your blood turn serum, and your lips
Unite by granulation;
Your bones necrose, you manikin."
At which I sobbed, "O foramen!"
"Coagulum, a clot," it said.

"Dear Prof., I hope I've passed your chair!"
I ventured in dejection;
"Debitants were given, and care
Was used against infection"—
When quick, hæmatherosis came,
And o'er my sense parapsis,
"Relapses," he said.

And suddenly I turned to gas
Beneath a strong compression;
"Combustion," said he o'er the glass,
"I'll treat upon this session."
Whereat occurred a thumping noise,
A sonorous fremitus.
"Bronchitis," I heard.

Now was I free and to me came Bouquets, congratulations;
Upon my brow a wreath of fame
Evolved by strange mutations;
My scroll I carried in one hand, a silk hat in the other,
When wide I woke to hear Moyer say:
"This ends our little quiz to-day."

A Lesson in Chemistry

(TO PROF. HAINES.) BY AN ATOM.

Of good our ills are made, and surely will Prove good to us, if only we Dissolve them with our Alchemy:

For nothing harmful is to him who knows
How to resolve the woe and pain
Back to their elements again.

The lack within us lies, and all is good
That comes to good men everywhere,
Through water, fire, or earth or air.

ALLEN

OF the private Hospitals in the city, this one is among the largest. During the past three years it has received and treated over two thousand patients annually.

Its patronage is not limited to the city or the state; but at times has had representatives from ten different states, and even to-day one can find within its walls, citizens from Ohio, Montana, Texas and Minnesota, as well as from the intermediate states. This, however, is not its boast, for with its staff as a guarantee, the limit of its patronage would always be determined by its capacity; but to do the greatest amount of good to the greatest number, to relieve the suffering of the distressed, to mitigate the pangs of the poor, and to lend a helping hand to the worthy, is its principal mission.

Up to this time the desire of the management has in this respect been very far from being gratified. The Hospital in no sense desired to deprive the profession of any resources that justly belong to it; but in the community there abounds such a mass of men, women and children, who are unable to employ efficient medical services, and who cannot carry out such details that will accomplish practical results, that medical advice is practically useless, so that it is more especially such that it would seek to care for in as great a number as possible.

Its work in caring for this particular class is limited only by its resources, and these resources are of three kinds. In the first place, its endowment fund, which is made up of donations by individuals which has been invested in productive real estate, the assessed value of which is twice the amount of the loan. Secondly, from donations which go directly to the support of beds. These are annual receipts given to maintain one bed for twelve months. Then comes miscellaneous donations of money and useful articles.

There seems to be an impression among some people that when a bed is endowed, that it is not a free bed, and that an institution that has seventy endowed beds and has them occupied by seventy free patients, it is not to that extent a free hospital. They consider that credit should be given to a hospital as a charity only when it gives freely that which it never received.

But the merest tyro can see at once that as an individual cannot bestow that which he does not possess, no more can a hospital dispense charity unless it shall have previously received something to dispense.

So that this brings out the true position of a free hospital, viz.: that it is the channel through which flow the gifts of generous hearted men and women; and the only difference between a public and a private charity is, that the support of the former is involuntary, while that of the latter is voluntary.

The Presbyterian Hospital began its existence with but several free beds, but by the end of ten years it had seventy, and there is every reason to hope that by the time it arrives at its majority its charity work will represent two hundred or more beds, with an expenditure of nearly one hundred thousand dollars annually.

The general average time which patients spend in a hospital is about twenty-five days, so that in the same ratio there would be given about seventy-three thousand days of care extended to twenty-eight hundred patients. As said before, this is what the Board are aiming and working for, and the sooner the day arrives the better it will be for the community, the profession and the medical students. Until that day comes it must be content with smaller things, and earnestly strive by painstaking care and fair dealing to so impress those who desire to help their fellow man, that it is worthy of their confidence and may be safely trusted.

Lake Forest University

JOHN M. COULTER, A. M., Ph. D., LL. D.,
President of the University.

Lake Forest College

THE courses of study and the methods of Lake Forest College are those most approved in modern colleges. Large privilege of election is offered, so that the greatest variety of individual tastes and needs are met. No prescribed courses are outlined, but several years of work are offered in each subject, of which the student may take much or little.

Certain requirements are made as to the number of different groups from which selection of work is made of those who are candidates for the graduating degree of B. A., but special students are permitted to take whatever subjects they are prepared for. Few subjects, long continued, is felt to be the proper educational method, as opposed to a large number of subjects taken in hasty and elementary fashion. With this belief, most of the departments will give no credit in any subject for less than a year of daily work. The subjects that can at present be obtained in this extended way are: Greek, Latin, German, French, English, Philology, English Literature, Biblical Literature, Philosophy, Political History, Social Science, Economics, Mathematics, Astronomy, Chemistry, Physics, Zoology, Botany and Geology.

The scientific laboratories are thoroughly equipped for work in a way that should appeal to any medical preparatory student who is ambitious to take part in the advancement of his science. The best apparatus and material, and the most advanced methods, enable the student to enter the great field of modern investigation.

Lake Forest College is now paying a good deal of attention to the proper preparation of students for the medical colleges, and outlines courses of greater or less length that have this purpose in view. In consequence of this a large number of students have taken advantage of the opportunity, and are laying such a foundation for subsequent medical study as will make them very strong medical students.

As many of the students of Rush know, the student life of Lake Forest is largely the dormitory life, as the town does not provide student accommodations. These dormitories are now becoming overcrowded, and if proper buildings can be secured, the college attendance will soon show a much better proportion to that of the professional schools. At present the college work is done in three buildings, besides which there is an excellent gymnasium, and houses for college clubs, Professors' residences, etc.

Besides the college, the Lake Forest plant has two preparatory schools—Lake Forest Academy and Ferry Hall Seminary—each one with its own buildings and Faculty.

It is a matter for regret that the undergraduate departments are so distant from the professional schools, for it prevents that all-around university spirit which is so desirable. Could the whole university come together on some common ground all of the departments would be stimulated. However, professional schools and undergraduate schools are all in the places best suited to their work, and a university sentiment must be sacrificed to department needs.

The reputation of Rush stands high at Lake Forest College, whose graduates will be found more and more continuing their studies in our own medical school.

Alumni Association

THE Annual Reunion of the Alumni Association of Rush Medical College was held on Monday, May 21st, Tuesday, May 22d, and Wednesday, May 23d, 1894. A new departure in the annual gathering was inaugurated at this time. Heretofore meetings had been held at various places in the city, but last year the meetings were all held at the College buildings. These meetings were exceedingly interesting and of unusual value. Large numbers of the Alumni were present from the various States and participated in the exercises.

At ten o'clock, on May 21st, the exercises were opened by a clinic on Internal Medicine given by Prof. LYMAN. At 1:30 P. M. there was a clinic on Diseases of the Chest, Throat and Nose, by Prof. INGALS. At 2:30 P. M. a clinic on Skin and Venereal Disease, by Prof. HYDE. At 4:00 P. M. the regular Class Day Exercises of the class of 1894 were held in the Amphitheater of the College. On Tuesday, May 22d, after an informal reunion of the Alumni at the College building, a clinic on general medicine was given by Prof. BRIDGE at 9:30. Then from 11:00 o'clock until 2:00 P. M. a reception was tendered to the Alumni in the Laboratory building. Students were at work on subjects of special interest to practitioners of medicine in the laboratories of Practical Anatomy, Chemistry, Histology, Pathology, Bacteriology and Experimental Physiology. A light lunch was served on the lower floor of the building. At 2:00 o'clock the Alumni and friends repaired to the Amphitheater of the College, where a surgical clinic was given by Prof. SENN. These clinics have been fully reported in THE CORPUSCLE at various times during the past year. At 4:00 o'clock a Scientific meeting was held in the College Amphitheater, and the following programme was carried out. These papers also have appeared in full in THE CORPUSCLE:

First, "The Future Requirements of Medical Education," by Dr. PERRY H. MILLARD, St. Paul, Minn. Second, "Exhibition of Splint for Treatment of Ordinary Fracture of Leg or Ankle," by Dr. WM. MEACHER, Portage, Wis. Third, "Vaginal Tamponade," by Dr. O. B. WILL, Peoria, Ill. Fourth, "Nature the Best Obstetrician," by Dr. JNO. G. MEACHAM, JR., Racine, Wis. Fifth, "Modern Transfusion," by Dr. L. L. MACARTHUR, Chicago, Ill.

In the evening arrangements had been made to attend Hooley's Theatre in a body to see the comedy of "Charley's Aunt." This was one of the most enjoyable features of Commencement time, and the whole lower floor of the theatre was occupied by the Alumni and their friends.

On Wednesday, at 9:00 o'clock, there was a Gynecological Clinic, given by Prof. ETHERIDGE, in the upper Amphitheater, and here, at 1:00 P. M., was held the annual business meeting of the Association. This meeting was called to order by Dr. A. L. Wright, class of '74, Carroll, Iowa, 1st Vice-President of the Association. The Secretary and Treasurer, Dr. John Edwin Rhodes, then read his annual report, from which we make extracts as follows: Attention was called to the fact from the membership in 1892, there was an increase in the total membership of 511 for 1893-94. The funds at the beginning of the year were $21.03, the amount turned over by the former treasurer. After unusual expenditures at the end of the year, there was a balance on hand at the time of the meeting of $313.03.

It became necessary during the year to entirely reconstruct the list of the Alumni. During the year circulars were mailed to those of the Alumni whose addresses could be obtained, calling their attention to the Association, and asking them to become members of it. The return of many of these letters enabled the Secretary to so reconstruct the list that at the present time it is as nearly accurate as it is possible to make it. Upward of ten thousand circular letters were mailed to the Alumni during the year, and a large number of copies of THE CORPUSCLE. It was suggested by the Secretary that some Alumnus in the city be appointed to have charge of the Alumni department of the Journal. This was subsequently done by the selection of Prof. Jno. M. Dodson. This department has been one of the most interesting in the Journal. The Faculty, during the year, contributed in no small degree to the successful efforts of the Secretary in arousing the interest of the Alumni in a revival of the Association. The history of the Association had never been written up, and it was with difficulty that data were found for the construction of such a history. However, from such data as could be obtained, it was written up by the Secretary and appeared in the PULSE of last year.

Dr. A. I. Bouffleur, class '87, the Committee on Necrology, made a report from which we extract the following:

Dr. John Henry Murphy.

In the death of Dr. Murphy, Rush Medical College lost one of its oldest and most loyal Alumni, and the medical profession one of its most distinguished members.

His life was an exemplification of the motto, "Work wins Worth," and it was by hard, steady application to duty that this man reached the very leadership of the profession in the great Northwest.

Dr. Murphy was born in New Jersey in 1826, reared in Illinois, and graduated from Rush College with the class of 1850.

Immediately after graduating he located in the vicinity of St. Paul, with whose growth and development into greatness he kept good pace until the infirmities of age began to be manifested.

Dr. Murphy had been a sufferer from diabetes for a number of years, and during the last six months of his life had suffered a great deal from numerous carbuncles about the head. Operations for their removal proved of but temporary relief, and on January 31st he succumbed to the disease.

Of late years it has been customary for his friends to refer to the deceased as the "Grand Old Man." He was a man on all occasions. At college, at the bedside, on the battlefield, in legislative halls, as a surgeon, in domestic and social duties, he was ever known as a man—the same large-hearted, jovial, charitable man.

Dr. MURPHY achieved the greatest success as a surgeon. He was of the old school, so called—a surgeon such as was made by the teachings of a Brainard and of a Gunn, and a surgeon who had to grapple with the disease unassisted by modern aids of diagnosis and therapeutics; a surgeon who of necessity considered little of the so-called purely practical side of the question.

He was an honored member of many associations and societies, and had but recently been president of the National Association of Railway Surgeons.

Those of you who are just entering the medical profession can find much in such lives as his to encourage and guide you in attaining the greatest of success in the medical profession.

This association should be, and I believe it is, proud of the record which this distinguished alumnus has left behind.

(A more detailed report appeared in the March CORPUSCLE.)

Dr. Wm. M. Haworth.

Through the courtesy of Dr. CHAS. F. WRIGHT, we are informed that on April 15th, 1894, Dr. HAWORTH died at the Wellington Hotel, Chicago, of embolism of the heart. He was born in Decatur, Ill., and attended college at Andover, Mass., and studied medicine at the University of Michigan, at Bellevue, and Rush Medical College, graduating from the latter with the class of '91.

He had a great liking for mechanical work and had secured several valuable patents before studying medicine.

He was but 27 years of age, and he pursued everything with the enthusiasm and intensity of a well equipped youthful mind. He was an industrious and earnest student and an enthusiastic practitioner, and had he lived would undoubtedly have achieved success in the practice of his chosen specialty, Dermatology.

While upon the threshold of our Commencement reunion, we are saddened by the death of another distinguished alumnus of this city.

Dr. Plymmon Sanford Hayes.

Dr. HAYES was born in Ohio, and died at his residence, No. 159 East 46th Street, Chicago, May 14th, 1894, at the age of 43 years.

His death was due to a complication of la grippe, pleurisy, etc., from which he had suffered for over four months.

Dr. HAYES graduated from the West Division High School in 1869, and from Rush Medical College in 1872. For five years immediately following his graduation he served as assistant to Dr. LYMAN, then occupying a chair of Chemistry and Physics. From 1877 to 1883 he filled the chair of Chemistry in the Woman's Medical College, and from 1880 to 1884 held the same position in the Chicago College of Pharmacy.

During later years he has devoted a great deal of time and energy to electro-therapeutics, and was professor thereof in the Chicago Policlinic at the time of his death. He was also Medical Examiner for the National Union and Medical Examiner-in-Chief of the Royal League.

Dr. HAYES contributed liberally to medical literature, and principally in the shape of small monographs upon topics pertaining to chemistry and electro-therapeutics. He was a member of the American Medical Association, Illinois State Medical Society, Sons of the American Revolution, and of the American Society of Therapeutics.

He has been identified with charitable and religious work in this city for many years. Dr. HAYES leaves a wife and three children.

The death of these men serves to remind us that as there was a beginning, so there must be an ending, and no man knoweth the length of his stay amongst us.

The Committee on Nomination, consisting of a representative from each of the classes present, reported the following list of officers for 1894-5, and they were unanimously elected:

President, - - - - - A. L. WRIGHT, Class of '74, - - Carroll, Ia.
 First Vice-President, - - W. J. McLEAN, Class of '69, - - - Fayette, Ia.
 Second Vice-President, - C. D. WESCOTT, Class of '83, - - Chicago, Ill.
 Secretary and Treasurer - JNO. EDWIN RHODES, Class of '86, - Chicago, Ill.
 Necrologist, - - - - - A. I. BOUFFLEUR, Class of '87, - - Chicago, Ill.

An appropriation was made by the Association of $20.00 for the purchase of two class tablets. This left at this time but seven tablets to be provided for to complete the number in the Amphitheater in the college.

A motion was made by Dr. WASHBURNE, of Indiana, to continue THE CORPUSCLE as the organ of the Association. Dr. WESCOTT made a motion that a vote of thanks be given to the Secretary for his efforts in behalf of the Association during the year. Dr. BOUFFLEUR moved that the sum of $25.00 be appropriated from the funds of the Association for the publishers of THE CORPUSCLE. The Association then adjourned.

After the adjournment of the Association the Alumni assembled at Central Music Hall to listen to the Annual Commencement Exercises of Rush Medical College. In the evening a banquet was given at the Grand Pacific, and the following programme was carried out; Second Vice-President, W. W. TORRENCE, M. D., '80, presiding:

SEVENTEENTH TRIENNIAL CATALOGUE

OF THE

RUSH MEDICAL COLLEGE

(MEDICAL DEPARTMENT LAKE FOREST UNIVERSITY)

CONTAINING THE NAMES OF THE

TRUSTEES, PRESIDENTS, INSTRUCTORS AND ALUMNI

FROM 1843 TO 1895

RUSH MEDICAL COLLEGE

Was chartered by a special act of the Legislature of the State of Illinois, February, 1837. It has graduated more than four thousand physicians.

This Seventeenth Triennial Catalogue contains the names of all its trustees, presidents, professors, assistant and adjunct professors, lecturers, quiz masters and demonstrators who have been connected with it since the date of its charter. Opposite the names appear the various titles borne and the length of service each has rendered. This Catalogue contains also the names of its alumni, together with the course of lectures at which they were graduated, and the consecutive number receiving the degree at each commencement.

The first course of lectures was delivered in the second story of a frame building on Clark street, opposite the present location of the Sherman House, in the city of Chicago. The building next occupied was on the corner of Indiana and Dearborn streets, in the north division of the city. In the course of fifteen years of residence in that division, three different buildings were occupied, each successively larger than its predecessor.

The great fire of 1871 destroyed the College, with all of its appliances for instruction. Subsequently, from 1871 to 1875, a temporary and rudimentary structure was occupied at the corner of Arnold and Eighteenth streets, on the same lot with the Cook County Hospital. Thence a removal was made to the edifice familiar to the greater number of its alumni, on the corner of Wood and Harrison streets. In 1887 the college became the medical department of the Lake Forest University. To-day this institution occupies two large buildings, each five stories in height. One is the original structure built in this locality in 1874-5; on the opposite side of Harrison street is the Laboratory, with a frontage of one hundred feet on a lot one hundred and thirty-six feet in width.

This Laboratory furnishes every facility for practical instruction in anatomy, in histology and pathology, in bacteriology, in chemistry, and in materia medica. It contains several recitation rooms, in which are daily instructed by quizzes and recitations six hundred students.

The present classes number eight hundred and forty-eight matriculates, the largest number collected in any Medical School in this country for the session of 1894-5. The clinics are held in the upper lecture room. In them every type and variation of medical and surgical disease is exhibited, and all the minor and capital operations of surgery are performed every week throughout the year.

On the north wall of the upper lecture room are displayed the bronze busts and oil portraits of all the Presidents of the College and of deceased members of the Faculty. A series of tablets of the different classes, from 1843 to the present date, surrounds these works of art, each tablet presenting a class motto in imperishable brass.

Adjacent to the main building is the Presbyterian Hospital, with a capacity of over two hundred beds.

The connection between the upper amphitheater of the College and the hospital is such that the patients are readily transferred for diagnosis or operative treatment from one building to the other. The Faculty of the College, almost without exception, constitutes the staff of the hospital.

Lake Forest College

HIS is one of the six departments of Lake Forest University, and is located at Lake Forest, Ill., a suburb of Chicago. At the same place are LAKE FOREST ACADEMY, (a preparatory school for boys), and FERRY HALL SEMINARY, (a school for young ladies).

The College now offers three years of work in each of the following subjects: Greek, Latin, French, German, English, Philology, English Literature, Biblical Literature, Political History, Social Science, Economics, Philosophy, Mathematics, Astronomy, Physics, Chemistry, Zoology, Botany, Geology.

From these subjects a four years' course is made up if a graduating degree is desired; but students are admitted to do special work for any shorter period, provided they show themselves prepared to do the work of their choice. A special Medical preparatory course is also provided.

During 1895 a summer session of eight weeks will be held.
